RUHR DEADLOCK TO BE BROKEN

France and Germany to Reach an Agreement.

DIPLOMATS ON THE SITUATION

Berlin's Reported Surrender in Order Cessation of Passive Resistance Forecasts an Understanding, They Say—German Surrender Held a Vindication of Premier Poincare's Policy—Promise From Paris.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Germany's reported surrender in ordering the cessation of passive resistance in the Ruhr valley forecasts a Franco-German agreement, restoring industrial activity in central Europe, according to the view held here by Washington diplomats.

While there was no official confirmation of news dispatches telling of the orders from Berlin to the Ruhr population, events during the past week had prepared officials and diplomats for news indicating that some understanding had been reached between the French and German governments.

The reported instructions from Berlin putting an end to passive resistance are regarded here as evidence that the Franco-German negotiations have reached a stage where an agreement may be expected.

Washington is convinced that Chancellor Stresemann in Berlin has been dealing with the French in an effort to break the Ruhr deadlock. Representatives of the two countries, it is felt certain, have been particularly active during the last few days. News from both Berlin and Paris has indicated that Germans and French alike were being prepared for the announcement of some understanding relative to the Ruhr.

So long as there was the possibility of early action by Great Britain the German government avoided direct negotiation with the Poincare ministry in Paris. Conditions in the empire, however, demanded a solution of the Ruhr problem, and the Stresemann cabinet apparently felt compelled to deal with France in order to obtain some relief.

Despite the critical situation in Germany, it is felt, Berlin would not have ordered the cessation of passive resistance without having received some promise from Paris. This promise, it is believed, must be directly concerned with the terms which France will grant to her prostrate foe.

The German surrender is a vindication of the Poincare policy and is regarded here as another blow to British prestige on the continent. Like other nations on the continent, Germany has found that she must reckon first with France, the dominant military power.

In Berlin it is said the situation is not cleared by the report of the Ruhr action taken by the German trades unions in settling definite conditions on which they will abandon their campaign of passive resistance. Those conditions include the return to the occupied regions of all those who were deported, with their families; the release of all prisoners held by the French, and an agreement that reparations must be fixed within the bounds of possible payment.

WARD TO GO ON TRIAL

State to Charge Blackmail Plot, According to Report.

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 11.—The sensational charge that Walter S. Ward planned to blackmail his father and that he slew Clarence Peters, the ex-marine, in the belief that Peters was a detective sent by the elder Ward to stop the blackmail plot, is expected to be the basis of the state's case against Ward when the murder trial opens here tomorrow.

The trial of Ward will come as the culmination of months of effort on the part of Ward, backed by his father's millions, to prevent the case coming to trial.

George S. Ward, president of the Ward Baking company, married a nurse, Mrs. Donn Laester, a pretty widow of 30, who had attended his first wife in her fatal illness in 1921. The marriage came a few months after Mrs. Ward died. George Ward was then past 50.

City Tears Up Rails.

Niles, O., Sept. 11.—Streetcar service on the Pennsylvania-Ohio Electric company's line through here was stopped when the city tore up several rails, effectually blocking traffic. The city is demanding that the company pay a share of the cost of repairing streets.

SELL-OUT CERTAIN.

Capacity Crowd to See the Dempsey-Firpo Fight.

New York, Sept. 11.—Over one million dollars' worth of tickets have been already sold for the Dempsey-Firpo fight this coming Friday night. There is no question of a sell-out, and indications are that more than twice the 85,000 capacity of the radio grounds could be filled. The $25, $40 and $5 seats are all gone, so tremendous has been the demand, and only $20 and $15 reserve tickets, roughly estimated at $2,000,000 worth, remain, together with 20,000 general $3 admission tickets to be put on sale at the grounds Friday afternoon. Dempsey's share is figured to run between $100,000 and $200,000, while Firpo is expected to cut in for between $120,000 and $150,000.

Navies Depend on Chance.

London, Sept. 11.—The disaster to the American destroyer flotilla Sunday is the most extraordinary happening in naval history, says the London Daily News in an editorial. "In the space of a few minutes the American navy suffered a loss greater than it did during the whole period of the war," continues the editorial, which concludes: "The reflection suggested by this regrettable misfortune is the dependence on chance by even the best equipped and most ably commanded modern naval units. A sudden storm catching the British fleet at a disadvantage might in a single day reduce us from a first-class to a third-class power."

COOLIDGE FAVORS WORLD COURT

First Commitment from President On the Question.

TO PRESS HARDING POLICIES

Coolidge Expected to Resubmit Proposal For American Membership in the World Court to the Senate When It Convenes—Chicago Likely to Entertain Republican National Convention.

Washington, Sept. 11.—President Coolidge favors America's entry into the world court.

This declaration was made at the white house by the Rev. Dr. William E. Barton of Oak Park, Ill., moderator of the Congregational church of the United States, immediately following a lengthy conference with the president. It was the first commitment on this question, either directly or indirectly, from the president since he assumed the executive office.

Dr. Barton declared that the president clearly gave him to understand that he intends to follow out the policies of President Harding on the world court and a general declaration that the Harding policies will be carried through was intended to include this subject. Dr. Barton, who heads the religious denomination of which the president and his family are communicants, is an ardent advocate both of the league of nations and the world court.

It is believed that President Coolidge will resubmit the Harding-Hughes proposal for American membership in the world court to the senate when it convenes in December.

Chairman Adams of the Republican national committee saw the president for the first time since his return to Washington last week. Following his conference he announced that the national committee will be called to meet in Washington the second week in December to fix the time and place of the 1924 national convention. At that time all cities bidding for the meeting will be given full opportunity to present their claims, the chairman said. Chicago appears to have the best look in. Fred Upham, treasurer of the national committee, already is said to claim enough advance pledges to insure Chicago's selection. Cleveland appears the most aggressive contender with Chicago. Ohioans are urging that city as a tribute to the late President Harding.

DESTROYERS SWEEP ON ROCKY COAST

Quake and Tidal Wave May Have Caused the Disaster.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Reports to the navy department failed to establish with any degree of definiteness the cause of the stranding of the seven destroyers, which were swept on the rocks of southern California coast late Sunday night.

A reaction from the Japanese earthquake and tidal wave was advanced by high naval officials as a possible cause of the disaster. Confusion of the radio signals or changes in the tides, resulting from the seismic disturbance across the Pacific, were also suggested as having been partly responsible for the greatest peace time casualty in the navy's history. "We don't know but some agitation due to the earthquake and tidal wave may have caused it," Secretary Denby said. "It may have been a tidal wave that hit them."

Within the past week, following the disaster in Japan, reports have been received from the Pacific coast of heavy seas and high waves which have been observed at points along the shore. According to high naval opinion, these disturbances may have been encountered by the destroyer fleet, throwing the vessels off their course and laying them at the mercy of swift tides which had been previously unknown along that part of the coast.

Tear bombs subjugated Walter Cochran, alleged maniac, who shot his wife, his mother-in-law and two policemen and stood off the entire police force for four hours behind the barricaded doors of his home in Belleville, Ill.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Donahy to Aid Veterans.

Springfield, O., Sept. 11.—Governor Donahy pledged his "complete cooperation, aid and support in obtaining relief and justice for the disabled veterans of the world war." The governor uttered the pledge here in an address before the state convention of the American Legion. He said he had been requested to name a "gold star" mother from Ohio to represent the state at the convention of American War Mothers at Kansas City the latter part of the month. "I desire to ask your organization to select that mother and inform me of your choice," he said.

Shearer and Hoskins on Trial.

Cleveland, Sept. 11.—The trial of Joseph A. Shearer of Columbus, former federal prohibition agent; Samuel A. Hoskins, also of Columbus, and A. Frank Counts of Cleveland, charged with conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law, began before Federal Judge D. C. Westenhaver. Among the charges against the defendants are allegations that they directly or indirectly received large sums of money declared to have been paid by the Aurbachs to prevent official interference with their illegal activities.

Charges Against Mayor.

Columbus, Sept. 11.—Mayor William Lodge of Silver Lake, Summit county, may be called before Governor Donahy to explain charges of misfeasance in office which have been filed against him, the governor indicated. The affidavits against Lodge charge that he was in the habit of issuing search warrants and affidavits for arrest signed in blank, letting his deputy marshals fill in the names and descriptions. It is alleged also that deputy marshals working for Lodge "settled cases out of court."

Go Over Embankment.

East Liverpool, O., Sept. 11.—Five persons were injured, one probably fatally, when the automobile in which they were riding went over an embankment while descending a hill, about four miles east of here. John E. Szalotte, 33, sustained a broken back.

Victims of Machines.

Cleveland, Sept. 11.—Eleanor Rogers was killed when an automobile in which she was riding overturned. Henry Nakel and Thomas Cloonan, each aged 40, died from injuries sustained when they were struck by automobiles.

Back Broken.

Chillicothe, O., Sept. 11.—James Williams, negro of Portsmouth, is in a hospital here with a broken back as a result of an automobile skidding and going into a ditch near here. Five other negro occupants of the car escaped with minor injuries.

Steamer Sinks.

Gallipolis, O., Sept. 11.—Pittsburgh and Cincinnati packet steamer "General Wood" struck rocks in the Ohio river below Dam 29 and sank. Passengers and crew reached shore safely. The steamer was valued at $90,000.

Girl Dies of Burns.

Marietta, O., Sept. 11.—Helen Stevens, 14, died from burns received in an explosion in the cellar of her home when accumulated gas ignited from the match which she had struck while looking for fruit.

Four convicts set fire to the penitentiary stables at Kingston, Ont., and during the confusion scaled the walls and escaped in a stolen automobile. Guards on the walls fired at them but missed.

WATER SYSTEM IS RESTORED

Long Step Toward Checkmating Plague Menace.

FOOD NOW MORE PLENTIFUL

Relief Work Gradually Overcoming Distress Caused by the Earthquake and Fire in Japan—China Responds Nobly to Urgent Calls For Relief. Order Prevails in the Wrecked Cities.

Shanghai, Sept. 11.—Ten days have elapsed since the cities of Tokio and Yokohama were almost completely wiped out by the earthquake and fire.

Relief work is gradually overcoming the distress suffered by the millions of Japanese and hundreds of Americans and other foreigners.

Food is at last becoming more plentiful. Every train and ship arriving in the stricken zone is docking its quota of supplies. The public parks of the capital city and the nation's famous seaport city resemble huge military barracks. Here countless thousands are being temporarily housed and fed.

First reports of the total casualties now appear to have been greatly exaggerated, but it is more than likely that the exact number of lives lost will never be known. Thousands of victims, injured in the collapse of their homes, were unable to escape and were cremated in the fiery whirlwind which swept the two cities and surrounding suburbs.

At this writing the death list in Tokio alone is conservatively estimated at between 25,000 and 30,000. The estimates of dead and injured at Yokohama varies from 30,000 to 100,000. No official figures are obtainable.

Japanese residents in China, foreigners and Chinese immediately responded to the urgent calls from Tokio and Yokohama for relief. As fast as double crews can load ships with rice, Japan's principal foodstuff, they are dispatched to the stricken sections.

Order prevails in Tokio and Yokohama, reports of late looting and pillaging to the contrary, according to official word received here by the Japanese consulate.

With the restoration of the water system a long step toward checkmating the possibilities of plague has been made, according to a statement received here from the home minister at Tokio. It is expected that the cholera and dysentery menace will be sufficiently checked to prevent the scourge of plague.

KILLS WIFE AND SELF

Friends of the Couple Tell Story of Dual Tragedy.

Situate, Mass., Sept. 11.—She had a million. He didn't have a dime. She was older than he. She knew he was unfaithful and she was getting ready to divorce him. He demanded $150,000 not to contest the divorce. She refused. He killed her, and then himself.

That is the story of the murder and suicide that happened in the big house called "Brookwood," where Hilary Peter Disher, veteran of the Philippine war and ex-army aviator, shot and killed his wife, Elsie Cheney Disher of the Cheney silk family, as told by friends of the Dishers, who had been spending a merry week-end at the big house and were awakened by the fatal shots.

Royal Marriage Arranged.

Brussels, Sept. 11.—Princess Marie Josef, daughter of the king and queen of Belgium, will marry the crown prince of Italy.

HAS SORE RIGHT ARM

Luis Firpo the Center of Concern, but He Is Not Worried.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 11.—Luis Angel Firpo was the center of concerned eyes when an ugly looking eruption appeared on his best bet, the mauling right arm. His manager was worried, and so was everybody else, everybody but Luis Angel. The sore, located at about the center of the back of the arm between the elbow and shoulder, originally was a rope burn caused by Luis' playful habit of literally bounding back from the ropes of the ring while boxing with his partners. Such a sore in Dempsey's camp would cause a rush of specialists from New York and elsewhere, but Luis Angel just told Washington, his negro rubber, to put a little more horse liniment and goose grease on the arm after work-out.

SOLAR PHOTOS TAKEN

Big Fog Bank Eclipse the Eclipse of the Sun.

San Diego, Cal., Sept. 11.—The solar eclipse of 1923 was wrecked on the biggest fog bank that has blotted the escutcheon of California climate for September in the weather annals. The eclipse, therefore, was total in a double sense, although the astronomical totality was a matter of faith and imagination somewhat.

Lieutenant John A. MacReady, the famous transcontinental army flier, and Captain A. W. Stevens, most expert of army air photographers, dropped to Rockwell held with the sad words, "nothing doing." They had just returned from a flight to the center of the path of totality east of Eureka, Lower California.

"We went to 16,300 feet," said MacReady, "but there were still clouds above us. There was no prospect of getting above the black masses. Also with only three and a half minutes of totality there was no time."

Lieutenant Leland Webb and Chief Photographer Haas of the naval air station rode through the fog and clouds to a height of 16,500 feet and there, circling serenely in the brilliant sky, they spent three and a half minutes taking motion pictures of the corona and phenomena.

Reds Active in Berlin.

Berlin, Sept. 11.—Berlin has been placarded with "Spartacus Letter No. 4," which contains a report on Sunday's shopmen's congress and boasts that the Prussian government was outwitted. The proclamation declares that Chancellor Stresemann and the present government must be overthrown, and that the sole salvation of Germany is a soviet republic closely allied with Russia. The letter demands the summoning of a national shops council congress. The preceding "three Spartacus letters" obviously were circulated surreptitiously throughout the workmen's sections as a substitute for the "Rote Fahne," which was suppressed four days ago.

PLANE BREAKS RECORD

Flies 238 Miles an Hour in a Test Flight in the East.

New York, Sept. 11.—A new world's record for airplane speed was set when the navy Wright flyer, which will represent the navy in the Pulitzer race at St. Louis next month, flew 238 miles an hour in a test flight at Mineola, L. I. The best previous mile was made by Sadi Lecoq, French flier, in Paris, Feb. 15 last. The new record was made in a straight-away flight, without the advantage of a dive from altitude for a start, and was closely timed. Lieutenant L. H. Sanderson, who drove the record mile, will carry the navy's colors at the Pulitzer event, Oct. 1, 2 and 3.

Soviet Gives Up Bessarabia.

Helsingfors, Sept. 11.—The soviet government has agreed to give up its claim to Bessarabia to Roumania. The Dniester river will be the new frontier.

GIRL USES HER HAT AS BANK

Can Draw Against Depository on the Top of Her Head Any Old Time She Likes.

It was already time to start for the theater. But Kathleen took her best hat down from the crowded closet shelf and frantically began to rip at the lining.

"But, my dear," her friend reminded, "there isn't time to make over your hat tonight. What are you doing?"

By this time Kathleen had got her hand in under the lining and had extracted—a $5 bill, relates the New York Sun and Globe.

"What an amazing hat," remarked her friend. "It seems to be like the miraculous pitcher in which there was always sustenance."

But the girl who has lived two years in a New York apartment and whose salary is given her in a little sealed envelope on the 1st and 15th of each month, explained: "You see, I can't possibly afford a bank account. There isn't any burglar-proof place in this apartment. I always lose my pocketbook. And I'm always running out of change in the most heartless places. So there came the idea of making my hats depositories. I keep $5 or $10 in each chapeau. In this way I always have money with me. And what robber would think of looking there for loot? And, best of all, I often forget how much I have and think it is all gone—when, lo, I find $10 in the far edge of some lining."

"The only objection is once I gave a hat away without examining the crown. And ever since I have been about $10 short."

She Wanted Another.

Edith visited the new arrival at my home, and was told that an airplane dropped it on the roof of a hospital and that the doctor brought it up. Before Edith reached home, she saw an airplane and cried out, to the amazement of passersby: "Please, mister, drop one, drop one."—Exchange.

FINDING HERSELF

By LOUISE M. ADDELSON

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

SLOWLY the bandage was unwound. Elizabeth's heart thumped loudly. Out of the shrouding blackness objects began to unfold themselves. That loving face with dumb anxiety written in every fine wrinkle was—unmistakably—the face of the mother she had never seen. And the kindly stranger who held her hand was, of course, Dr. Harvey Whitehill, the famous young surgeon. She stared at them for a long, trembling interval, and bent her head, weeping.

"I can see!" she said. "Oh, how wonderful it is to see!"

Two years later Dr. Harvey Whitehill, after a strenuous day in the office, found a girl cuddled in a corner of his library sofa.

The doctor's tired eyes brightened. "Elizabeth! What a delightful surprise!"

"I have to come in every once in a while to tell you how happy I am," explained Elizabeth.

"If you are as happy as you look—"

"Far, far happier."

He seated himself beside her. "Some tales I hear about you! Leading lady of the newest comic opera! But who could resist such a glorious voice—and such a glorious girl!"

"I have such a lot to tell you, Dr. Harvey. My new opera opens tonight, and promises to make me rich and famous. I have procured a delightful little apartment for mother and myself, and some gowns that are perfect dreams. Last, but not least, three perfectly charming gentlemen have asked me to marry them."

"Throw them all over and marry me," suggested the doctor.

Tears came into Elizabeth's eyes. "If I found it possible to sacrifice one bit of my beautiful new existence, doctor dear, it would be for you. But I'm very, very selfish. I'm afraid. My sole desire is to live—and to forget—the darkness from which you liberated me."

"You certainly created a sensation, Elizabeth," said Mr. George Barrows, soberly, the following night across the restaurant table at which they sat. "I'm sorry you made such a hit."

Elizabeth's eyes, brilliant with excitement, widened. "And I thought you'd be glad!"

"A famous operatic star will never marry me."

She smiled wistfully. "If I did people would say I was marrying you for your money."

Elizabeth's hand, light as thistle-down, touched his sleeve. "Dear George Porgie!" she said, softly. "Most of the things we want are bad for us. I would be bad for you."

"You couldn't be. You—you are wonderful, Elizabeth. I feel very small and humble before you."

A buzz rose in the room, and the sound of a newsboy shrieking. The buzz grew louder. Barrows asked a passing waiter what the trouble was.

"An accident, sir. Several people killed. Doctor Whitehill, the eye specialist—"

"Doctor Whitehill!" Elizabeth rose, white and shaking. "Killed! Oh, my dear, dear Doctor Harvey! Take me to him, George, quick, oh, quick!"

Barrows guided her to his machine. "I didn't know—I didn't think—"

A Japanese servant admitted them to the doctor's apartment. They had barely time to look around before the doctor appeared, a look of pleased astonishment on his face as he saw Elizabeth.

"My dear girl! What is the trouble? Are you ill?"

Elizabeth jumped into his arms with a sobbing cry. "Dear doctor, they told me you were dead!"

"They did? Well, I'm very much alive, thank you! There was an accident. I was in the crowd, and they sort of got the facts mixed. Why, Elizabeth! It's worth dying for, to be wept over like this!"

Elizabeth clung to him, frantically. "Don't—don't leave me! I—I want to stay with you always. Can—can we get married—tonight?"

His arms about her, Doctor Whitehill regarded her intently for a long moment before he spoke.

"Honey, I want you—more than anything in life, but I'll not take advantage of a moment of hysteria to get you. Your career—your singing—"

"My career—my singing—they mean nothing. Hereafter I shall sing only for you. I have but one desire—to be with you—sustain you, so that you can bring light to others—as you brought it to me. So, you stupid darling," dashing a few tears away, "don't talk so much. You can't get rid of me. You had better go out and find somebody to marry us."

"If you please," said the depressed and forgotten George Barrows, "my auto waits outside. Since I can't serve in any other capacity, will you allow me to be your chauffeur, or perchance your best man, as you may need one tonight?"

"Poor Georgie Porgie!" said Elizabeth. "Harvey, meet the dearest man in the world, next to you. If I didn't love you so much I certainly would have married him."

The two men shook hands heartily, after which the three went forth into the night in search of a marriage license and a minister.

An Added Beneficiary.

A news item says that American women spent $150,000,000 last year on cosmetics.

"Her face is my fortune," says the manufacturer.

One for Peculiarities.

Chinese medicine developed a special remedy for fossilized "dragon bones" derived from extinct herbivora. They are also fond of "dragon teeth," as fossilized shells are called. Shantung glue is made from asses' skins. In a certain town of that province is a well, the water of which, when drunk by asses, makes their skins especially good for making glue. This glue brings a fancy price, as it is a famous tonic throughout China.

Beware of Apologizing.

Apologizing—a very desperate habit—one that is rarely cured. Apologizing is only egotism wrong side out. Nine times out of ten, the first thing a man's companion knows of his shortcomings is from his apology.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

X-Ray Detects Swallowed Coins.

In the government mint in Japan an X-ray machine is used to examine suspected employees as they leave the establishment daily, and it has revealed the presence of coins that had been concealed in the guilty one's stomach.

Shoes in Colors Match the Dress

Various Tones Used Singly and in Combination With Others.

Bootmakers are among the most versatile people in the world. Even the dressmaker of today, notes a Paris fashion writer in the New York Tribune, is scarcely able to keep pace with the modern shoemaker in clever ideas. There apparently is no end to the original things that he can do.

The colors seen in shoes naturally follow those in dresses. All the gray and brown tones are used singly and in combination with one another. The grays range from the shade known as silver gray to smoke color, and the browns from fawn to the darker cocoa shades. Otter is particularly popular at the present time.

In the novelty class are shoes made of bright-colored kid. It has been some time since slippers of colored kid were worn to any extent. All the greens, reds and browns seen in dresses are reflected in the newest footwear of this sort. Not every woman will have the courage to appear in shoes of bright green or red, but the dark blue and bottle green shades will no doubt become popular, even with the more conservative woman. Colored kid is used for trimmings, such as tongues, inserted strips and heels, as well as for entire shoes.

To start an epidemic of color in clothes is like upsetting hundreds of dye pots. Even as far-reaching as shoes is the influence of bright-colored prints, which show no sign of waning.

At the recent International Silk exposition representatives of the exclusive shoe shops of America were to be found mingling in the booths searching for printed materials from which to make shoes for the coming summer.

Cut-steel shoe ornaments are having a tremendous vogue in Paris at the present time. So great is the demand for these that manufacturers are charging as high as 250 francs for a pair of shoe buckles, and the retail price is often double this.

These ornaments are in oval and in closed designs. They are so large that they exaggerate the size of the foot, especially since they are placed directly on the instep of the high-tongue or galter style of shoe.

A season of great extravagance in all forms of shoe buckles and tongue ornaments made of cut steel, rhinestones and bronze is upon us. This probably sounds the knell of the strap slipper of sandal type. If the strap remains, the chic of the shoe must lie in a buckle or similar ornament. Gold tassels or pendant ornaments studded with brilliants are seen on the newest evening slippers.

Two Extremes Noted in the Smart Frocks

Smart frocks seem to go to either of two extremes. They may stress one tone or introduce bright touches of color. There's a feeling for odd bits of color in spring models. Sometimes it's narrow strips of colored embroidery down the back and front. Sometimes, again, these odd inserted strips appear at the sides where the seams of the frock would be.

In an ultrasmart dress of dark navy cloth, crystal beads make the only bit of color. They appear in several slender lines about the bateau neck and sparkle into a dashing design at the front.

Black and White Used in Chic Sports Outfit

A new idea in sports wear is this combination of black and white checked worsted coat, with a white flannel skirt, knife-plaited. To complete the outfit goes a white hat with green and black trim.

Dinner Dress Import Is of Crepe Romaine

This artistic dinner dress of apricot crepe romaine, with a broad silver stripe and banded with platinum fox, shows a smartly draped cape of the same material, to be worn, if desired, with the gown.

How the French Women Arrange Their Coiffure

No matter what her style of hairdressing may be, the French woman permits her features to show. She may draw a lock of hair out to cover her ears, but she never permits her hair to look frizzly. Almost all French women use brilliantine and brush the hair back from the temples. This gives them a sleek and well-groomed appearance. The French woman also wears her hat low enough on the back of her head to take care of the stray locks, for the straggling "scolding lock" is a blemish to the otherwise smart-appearing woman. She never can look well with these stray hairs at the nape of her neck.

The last word in hairdressing shows the hair uncurled and drawn away from the ears as in opposition to the much waved and puffed coiffure which has been in vogue for several years. The psyche knot at the nape of the neck is fashionable for evening. Most hairdressers give the effect of a plain and almost precise arrangement, thus serving as a foil for handsome head-dresses.

A hairdressing which makes a charming frame for the face shows the hair drawn back to the crown of the head, the ends curled and wound carefully around a large comb, giving the effect of smoke curling up into the air.

The increasing variety of coiffures accounts for the vast number of hair ornaments now being shown. It would seem that every conceivable type of hair ornament of all ages has been revived or used as a basis for some newer design.

Fur Coats Are to Be Slimmer Next Season

Fur coats will be slimmer next year, if we are to believe what designers say.

This season's coats and capes have been rather voluminous, falling in full lines from shoulder to hem. The present French styles, however, are far more slender in silhouette than ours and we will undoubtedly be following their lines next season.

Already importers are showing advance models based upon French imports with long, slender lines. It is presumed that the long skirt Vogue will continue throughout the coming year, hence advance models all concentrate on the 51-inch length, with a decided tendency toward the narrow ankle line. In some cases the ankle line is so scant that inside straps and under linings are provided to make walking more comfortable.

Coats and dolmans are gaining over the cape for daytime wear. The cape with the side slits for the arms will probably remain staple for evening wear.

One-Piece Dresses in Gay, Peasant Coloring

Little one-piece dresses for children are made with embroidery at the top of the hem, around the neck and where the frock opens in front, over the shoulders and around the sleeves in gay, peasant coloring. The materials used are light colored linens. Some dresses are embroidered with round or oblong medallion designs, and when the linen is white heavy linen lace is scantily quilted around the medallions.

Fudge aprons, tea aprons and fancy work aprons all come in for their share of embroidery, and some of them are very original and attractive. One in old blue linen had oblong, embroidered motifs in white and gay colors, and around each motif a little crocheted linen lace was quilted, which gave a very foreign effect to the work.

Summer Mode. A gown which, owing to its present popularity, will be repeated during the summer months, is the long bodiced organdie frock with the full skirt trimmed in bands of wide velvet ribbon of a shade darker than the organdie. Ribbon forms the tiny sleeves and outlines the rounded neck. In grayish blue this gown would be most attractive for summer afternoon affairs.

PUBLIC INVITATION.

The old boys of '61—members of Circleville's own, the 114th O. V. I. respectfully asks the public to meet with them at their campfire at the Memorial hall Wednesday evening at seven o'clock. This is the anniversary of the regiment and there are only a few of the boys left and those here would be pleased to meet you. Everybody that can get away Wednesday evening, come and give the "old boys" a rousing welcome. 10sept22.

Atmospheric Action.

The atmosphere of the earth acts very much in the same way as does the glass of a greenhouse—it allows the rays of the sun to pass through, but imprisons the heat. Thus it is cooler on the top of a mountain than at the sea level, because though the mountain top is nearer the sun, the atmosphere is much less dense.

Taught by Experience.

Dr. Samuel Johnson, the man who first said, "Hell is paved with good intentions," was a man who endured the severest poverty, and was always put off by those whom he asked for support, only to be told after he became famous that they had intended to help him.

THRIFT and EDUCATION

We think that "Thrift" should be as much the part of the American child's education as arithmetic, geography and spelling.

Doesn't it sound rather inconsistent to teach all the fine points about MAKING MONEY without saying a word about how to TAKE CARE OF IT after it is made.

A good way to teach thrift, is for each and every parent to see that his child has a Savings Account in this solid institution.

Such a step will have a beneficial influence on the child's future character.

YOUNG REPLY
 Received From Dr. William Carson—Will Attend Centennial.
 A very young reply has been received from Dr. William Carson, last pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, of Circleville, to the invitation sent him to be present at the Centennial. It was brief and to the point and reads as follows: "Invitation received. Much obliged. All right; you may count on me for the sixteenth. Fraternally, William Carson."
 It will be recalled by quite a number of citizens that while there were two Presbyterian churches in Circleville Rev. Carson was the pastor of the Central church, the building of which is now being used by the Noecker Motor Co. When the two churches united Rev. Carson became pastor of the united church in the building of the "First" church the church then being called "The Presbyterian church" of Circleville. While Dr. Carson preceded Dr. Stratton as a pastor he is a somewhat younger man and now is honorably retired living in Indianapolis, Indiana.

Was Late With Her Gossip.
 Mrs. Doherty was the gossip of the suburb of Wimbleysend, and whenever any of her neighbors met her they always prepared to receive a nice titbit of scandal about some of their friends.

Mrs. Gadabout loved gossip nearly as much as did Mrs. Doherty, and so she was extremely pleased when she saw the latter lady coming along in her direction one morning when she was out shopping.

"Did you tell Mrs. Newife that you saw her husband in town with a strange woman?" Mrs. Gadabout asked when they had exchanged greetings.
 "Yes," was the reply, "and I wish I hadn't now. She just smiled at me in her wise way and said: 'Yes, I knew all about that. My husband saw you and knew you'd come straight back to tell me, so he telephoned the news to me himself.'"

Women's Sphere.
 Eventually we may be forced to concede that woman's sphere is this one in which we live—San Diego Tribune.

TEST NEVER FAILS
First Act in the Morning Proves Character.
Just How Man Conducts Himself When Alarm Clock Wakes Him Is the Revelation.

If you want to know a man's character through and through, there are two methods. You can either see him daily for ten years, or you can observe him for ten minutes just after his alarm clock has rung in the morning.

The man who will succeed identifies himself before the tinny clamor has really begun. Throwing back the bed clothes he leaps to the floor, strangles the clock and goes right to work on his setting-up exercises. Such a man is an asset in any office and a criminal nuisance anywhere else, remarks the New York Sun and Globe. He will never be late to work, he will grin cheerfully when asked to stay after 5 o'clock, he will talk about the stock market, to a poet or a beautiful woman, and his idea of a vacation is to get up at 6 o'clock and get an early start for the six-hour climb of the nearest mountain.

Then there is another type, who never allows the alarm to ring more than a few seconds. He is almost as able as the man who will succeed, almost as ambitious, but he is human; he is late once every six months or so, and he has to stifle harsh words that rise to his lips when he is asked "Just to finish those up before you go," he often likes to forget his business altogether, and he appreciates a quiet morning with a pipe and a book. You can spot him, because he walks across the room to the clock. He is not superhuman and he is a little bit afraid that if his reveille call is with in reach of the bed he will be tempted to turn it off and go to sleep again.

Coming down the scale is the man who wakes promptly, but after turning the indicator to "off," says to himself: "I guess I can dress and eat breakfast in forty minutes," and lies in bed for a luxurious five minutes, which he sometimes stretches to six or seven minutes. He is the average man, never discharged, occasionally late, and seldom promoted. He works with reasonable diligence in office hours, but always has a pressing engagement at quarter past five which prevents his working overtime, although he wishes he could and will stay late any other day.

Of course, in the abyss, there is the lethargic animal who has not even energy enough to silence the alarm. He has set it the night before to give him time to bathe, dress and breakfast in leisure, but he does not stir as the alarm rings itself out nor for half an hour or so afterward. Even then, his mother, his wife, his sister, or his roommate, has to pull off the bed clothes and shout in his ear before he will get up, throw on his clothes, and run for the subway with a piece of toast in his hand.

His business career is obvious. Late several times a week, he spends the day reading a paper, wishing he could get a better job, and asking the boss for a raise. He usually lasts about six months in each office.

But happiest of men is he who has no alarm clock at all, whose wife taps him on the shoulder at quarter past 7, saying, "Time to get up, dear. Your bath is waiting and breakfast is almost ready. Do you want your eggs scrambled or fried?"

Motor In Near East.
 Ninety per cent of all automobiles in Syria and Palestine are of American make. Palestine is a transformed territory. It is no longer a pastoral land untouched by modern life. American agricultural machines are there, and whereas before the war it took four days to journey from Jerusalem to Nazareth, it can now be done in four hours.

There is a motor car service between Beirut and Haifa, and between Haifa and Damascus. This route brings Bagdad within sixty miles land journey throughout Syria, Palestine, Mesopotamia and in certain parts of trans-Jordan and Arabia the American motor cars now link up remote communities and provide cheaper and more comfortable travel than by rail.

Odd Experience.
 One day we were ready to go to town on an errand and our car refused to start. My husband tried everything he could think of, but to no avail. Next morning we hitched the team to the car and dragged it to our village garage, five miles away. I went along to guide the car. Thinking something was seriously wrong, we tied our buggy on behind to come home in. To our surprise the mechanic cranked the car twice and it started nicely. Just a little water had gotten in during a rain storm, and when it dried out nothing was wrong. We did feel foolish.—Chicago Journal.

United States' Wood Consumption.
 The United States uses more wood than any other country. In fact the consumption in this country equals about two-fifths of the entire consumption of the world, or, expressed in round figures, about 22½ billion cubic feet, declares the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture. The per capita consumption in this country is 212 cubic feet, of which 110 cubic feet, or a little more than half, is saw timber, and the balance consists of cordwood, continues the department's report, which was recently printed for public distribution.

 Miller & Dunbar, attorneys of Columbus, who represent The Pickaway Water company, were in the city Monday in consultation with Attorneys Judge Dresbach, C. A. Leist and J. L. Heise, who represent the interests of the city concerning a new franchise.

Red Lender Warns Workers.
 Berlin, Sept. 11.—"If the masses of workmen don't join our ranks soon, I do not hesitate to give notice that I will drag them out of their houses by force, if necessary. Workingmen have only a few days in which to volunteer, and if they don't they will be commanded with the bayonet to volunteer." This was the striking part of an address made to the Saxon socialist and communist "organizations for self-defense" by their commander at the parade grounds at Dresden.

Ruhr Workers' Terms.
 Cologne, Sept. 11.—The chairman of the Essen German trades unions announces that the passive resistance in the Ruhr will be abandoned on three conditions: The return to their homes of all those who have been deported from the occupied regions, with their families; release of all prisoners; the summary rejection of any attempt to intringe on the sovereign rights of the reich and the revocation of all laws which limit the acceptance of economic reparations, with liability fixed within bounds possible of fulfillment.

Mussolini Again Balks.
 London, Sept. 11.—It is learned here that Premier Mussolini now refuses to accept the understanding reached by the ambassadors' conference Friday last that Corfu be evacuated by Italy as soon as Greece has accepted in full the decision of the conference by paying £500,000 into court. Mussolini argues that there will be no evacuation of Corfu until all the proceedings connected with the Janina murders are terminated. The British government declines to accept this interpretation and in the event of Mussolini not receding from his attitude insists that the matter come up at Geneva for the league of nations' decision.

YEARS AND YEARS

Human Race More or Less Dissatisfied is Pretty Well Off.

Speaking of years and youth, and age, and such things, what are they, anyway? There is an insect that lives only 24 hours—that is an old man at noon and shuffles off at midnight. On the other hand there is the crow, that lives a hundred years and croaks every day of the whole hundred years and there is also the elephant, who lives a hundred and fifty years and sometimes two hundred and maybe misses a lot of fun that even a 24-hour insect may have—for you will have to admit that an insect can do things and go places that an elephant can't.

Then there is the swan, which lives a hundred years, too, and never says a word, or at least is never allowed to sing, until it dies. A wren lives only two or three, but sings all it wants to, and the neighbors never complain. All a swan does is to swim around and never say a word, but a wren hears all the news and gossips as much as it likes.

And consider the monkey and the tortoise, too. You may be surprised to learn that a monkey lives only 16 to 18 years, because you are sure you know some that are older than that. A tortoise lives a hundred, for tortoises have been found with dates carved on them, tortoises who were born before the Mexican war and are probably still wondering how it came out. And yet a man would a good deal rather make a monkey of himself than almost anything else. No one ever heard of a man making a turtle of himself.

There is the crocodile, too, which scientists tell us lives to be a hundred; and you know how popular a crocodile is. A dog lives only 30 years at the most and a horse 30, and a cat only 18, but no one ever keeps a crocodile, even tho they keep so much better.

No, sir, it doesn't matter how long you live; what matters is how long you are living it. A rhinoceros lives only 20 years, but while he does the just about has his own way. A parrot lives 80 years longer, but no one ever tries to make a rhinoceros say "Pretty Polly." I never heard a parrot say it yet who didn't seem ashamed of himself; and as for a rhinoceros saying it, why that is unthinkable.

One thing, at least, seems to be certain: Man has it about right. It would be tough to live only a day, like the insect mentioned and never know how the Reds finished or how the Tigers came out; and on the other hand it would be equally tough to be an elephant and have to listen to a lot of wise cracks by a lot of people 150 to 175 years younger than you are.

Yes, sir, we are pretty well off as we are, the more or less dissatisfied human race.

RICE IS JAVA'S MAIN CROP

Cultivation of the Staple a Slow Process, All the Work Being Done by Hand.

Rice is the most important of all crops in Java. The most productive method of cultivating it is by means of "sawahs" or wet fields. The sawahs consist of plots of ground surrounded by little dykes which allow water either to be run in or off. Where the land is sloping the fields are formed into a succession of terraces, causing the water to trickle from one to the other.

Rice is sown by the natives by hand. After sowing, the fields are flooded by day and drained by night for eight or ten days, says the Detroit News. In about six weeks the spikes are replanted in groups of two or three stems together, each group being stuck into the muddy soil at a distance of about one inch apart. The soil is then flooded and drained every two or three days, and at the end of the fourth or fifth month, after replanting, the crop is ready to be gathered.

The harvest is gathered stem by stem, the natives standing and cutting them at a height of two feet eight inches from the ground.

The rice, after being stacked in bundles and dried, is put into a trough and a stamp or pestle is used to separate the grain from the straw. The grain is husked by means of a large mortar in which disks of stone, iron, or wood are kept moving either by buffalo traction or water power.

Beastly Language.

Certainly dogs understand language and sometimes seem to try and make sounds resembling words. A French scientist tried to teach a monkey to talk, and got it to say "feu" (French for fire) whenever a match was struck. The scientist smiled when asked why he did not teach the animal English. Really the animal enjoyed blowing out the flame! It has been estimated that the maximum vocabulary of monkeys is about thirty "words"—a word being a definite cry common to all members of the species, and indicative of an emotion.

HAVE SIXTH SENSE

Vipers Believed to Possess Unknown Faculty.

New York Curator Says Exact Nature of Reptile's Sixth Sense is Incomprehensible to Man.

The intuitive flash commonly known as a hunch or a sixth sense has been explained more or less satisfactorily by Freud and other psychologists as it applies to man, but no one ever psychoanalyzed a snake. Hence the mysterious sixth sense of the lowly pit viper is still a poser.

In the opinion of Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of reptiles at the Bronx zoo, the exact nature of the snake's sixth sense is incomprehensible to man, as he possesses no vestige of the unknown faculty himself.

It is only in that type of snake distinguished by a slight indentation in front of the eyes on each side of the head, and generally known as pit vipers, that the puzzling phenomenon is present. The indentation is the outward indication of a series of two cavities sunk into the snake's skull. It is a simple but delicate organ, well lined with a sensitive membrane and connected with what passes for a brain in the reptile. It is evidently in active operation, and its condition shows that it is not a lingering vestige of an outgrown stage of evolution as are the small bones which prove that snakes once had legs.

The pit viper, which includes the rattlesnake, moccasin, copperhead and "fer-de-lance," has the same rudimentary inner ears as other serpents, and must use its forked tongue on the tuning fork principle to hear. In that connection it is no better than the garden variety of snake. But in most other ways it is infinitely superior. It can almost think.

Inasmuch as the only type of serpent which does display signs of mental power at all is distinguished by the pit it is logical to presume that it is the seat of the snake's sixth sense.

Snakes certainly are not intelligent, says Mr. Ditmars, and they are incapable of reasoning. Yet some of the acts performed by pit vipers can only be explained in one of two ways—either they have a mysterious added sense or they have the capacity for memory and so can profit by experience. Scientists who have studied reptiles are convinced that the former theory is the more tenable.

Such snakes seem to sense the presence or approach of an enemy and even detect the imminence of other forms of danger. Too, they have a homing instinct more remarkable than the homing pigeon, which at least has the advantage of a bird's-eye view. No matter how far afield a rattlesnake may roam in the course of a summer it will invariably return with unerring accuracy to its hibernating place when the air becomes chilly.

There is only one species of pit viper indigenous to the tropics and that displays the same faculty in regard to its regular home as the hibernating species of the North. And its talents as a weather prophet would put to shame the best efforts of our learned experts with all their apparatus.—New York Sun-Globe.

Putting Drama in Its Place.

An idea of some of the difficulties under which people throughout the country labor in any attempt to reap profit from dramatic and opinion in motion picture will be gained from the following experience of the late Creston Clarke, the actor:

While playing in a good-sized city he was approached one day on the street by an eager young man, who said:

"How do you do, Mr. Clarke? I saw your performance last night. I'm on the—"

"Oh!" said Mr. Clarke. "And how do you like newspaper work?"

"I think it's fine," replied the youth. "I'm just starting in at it. I'm only dramatic critic now, but if I do well they're going to give me police work."—From Everybodys Magazine.

Poor Henry!

A Baltimore man who was formerly a resident of a town on the Eastern Shore recently revisited his old home town after an absence of many years. One day he was talking with an old friend about various people he formerly knew.

"What became of the Hall family?" he inquired.

"Oh," said the latter, "Tom Hall did very well. Got to be an actor out on the Pacific coast. Bill, the other brother, is something of an artist in New York, and Lucy, the sister, is doing literary work. But Henry never amounted to much. It took all he could lay his hands on to support the others."—From the Baltimore Sun.

NEW BOOKS

Many Interesting Volumes of Recent Travel at Public Library.

Amongst the new books that have been added to the Public Library are some especially interesting volumes of recent travel. From the increase in the reading of travel books, by readers who are ordinarily considered fiction readers, the number of regular lovers of travel, and the fact that the Monday club is about to start on a year of travel study, these books will no doubt have an unusual run of popularity.

First Day.

Third Day

Hon. Oliver Wayne Stewart, president of the Foundation, editor National Enquirer, former associate of ex-Governor Hanly. One of the greatest platform speakers in America.

Rev. Norma C. Brown, formerly chaplain Illinois senate. A most charming and impressive speaker.

Hoist by His Own Petard.

A working sense of fun is a good thing to possess, for sometimes if the humor of a situation cannot take the place of cash there is no compensation at all. A case in point is that of H. D. Traill, an English litterateur. One of Traill's earliest journalistic commissions was to write a series of articles in a paper edited by a lady well known years ago as a strong advocate of "women's rights," as the phrase went, on the anomalies and injustices of the British law relating to woman's property. The articles were duly written and published, but the remuneration agreed upon was not forthcoming. After repeated but fruitless demands for payment Traill brought a suit against the lady, who successfully invoked against her contributor the law she had engaged him to attack.

And the Hunter Couldn't Answer.

A hunter and a golfer were at it hammer and tongs. "To thunder with hunting," said the golfer, "I can buy all the meat I want in a butcher shop, and it's better than you can shoot." "Is that so?" said the hunter. "Can you buy jacksnipe in a butcher shop? Can you buy venison? Can you buy canvasback?"

"Sometimes," said the golfer, "and sometimes not. But you can go hunting and shoot a pound of pork sausage?"

Heart Trouble Not Fatal.

Heart disease is not the barrier to an active life of usefulness as has always been supposed, said Dr. Frederick Brush to the National Society for the Promotion of Occupational Therapy. Nothing is gained and much lost by telling cardiac patients not to work, not to carry, not to play, and so on. Under proper supervision the person with heart trouble can take a large part in active life.

Patched-Up Organ.

A prominent poetess writes: "My heart sings only when it breaks." As she averages one such song per week, what a condition her heart must be in.—Boston Transcript.

AMUSEMENTS

The Paramount picturization of "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime" from the novel by Dana Burnett, Walter Hiers' first star comedy, was heartily enjoyed at its premier showing at the Met theater last evening.

John Percival Billings, a haberdashery salesman, is down to his last thin dime. What to do—eat, drink? He does neither but invests his remaining capital in a long black cigar. Therein lies a tale. What woe what trials and sufferings that purchase caused him! but, nevertheless, it brought him sweet romance, with Jacqueline Logan as his foil.

Between dodging a love sick girl and escaping the clutches of a band of revolutionists in South America, Hiers has one of the fastest moving comedy drama roles we have ever seen. There are many genuine thrills in the picture, if a novel bullfight and near assassination mean anything. Opening in New York with a generous portion of ocean scenes and a thrilling climax in a small South American republic, this picture has an unusual variety of backgrounds.

Thru the spending of a dime, Hiers gets himself into a revolution; outwits a bunch of conspirators; narrowly escapes a firing squad and wins for himself a beautiful girl. This ought to be enough action even for a wild west thriller. Miss Logan's work is admirable.

The essential point in all flower arrangement is that there shall be form and balance, yet that the composition shall not be perfectly symmetrical, as perfect symmetry is not found in nature. JOE'S STORY

By JANE GORDON

(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union)

JOE came out into the garden and looked down the road.

In Joe's honest eyes was an expression of wistful longing not unlike the hurt look of Ted, the dog, when reproved for wrongdoing. But Joe had not been reproved. There was no one interested enough to reprove him or even to sympathize in his loneliness.

Joe was quite alone, not only in these hills which stretched so far before, but Joe was alone in the world. He could not remember his mother, and the memories he had of his father were not pleasant. A stern, forbidding man, Joe's father, now dead. Joe recalled the endless doing of tasks about the farm home, but he could recall no word of kindly appreciation.

Early he had been obliged to go out—like lads of olden story—to earn his living adventurously or not. One season Joe had traveled with a small opera troupe trying to make merchandise of his talent for music. The violin, which was his solace, was not his fortune. Some way he managed to get to college, for the profession of an engineer was his goal. And at college he still worked, and later taught, accomplishing that which alone had seemed impossible. Then came the tragedy. The college doctor dealt unhappily the cruel blow. Joe's lungs were no good. Too much night work, added to steady day work, the elderly man pronounced. There was one hopeful promise—mountain air and rest. So Joe alone had found his way to the high hills to solitude in a deserted cottage, shabby and unfurnished.

The garden flourished for it was there that the lonely man sought healing from nature as he labored in the sun. His pride was his flock of white hens. Joe's chickens became to him understanding friends, yielding payment for interested care. But, oh, the loneliness and longing that was ever unsatisfied. Who, in among strangers, might be found to bear him company in his difficult retreat? He had not gone to visit the doctor again for railroad fare cost money, which he could not spare.

Joe knew that he was growing stronger—his own physician in a test of climbing hills and further tests of endurance. And so he measured his days of hope as strength grew. If one day he might once more take a try at that career long dreamed of and labored for—to plan great bridges, to carve tunnels through the earth—to achieve! He had renounced that happier dream, which is a young man's right, of a home—home which he had hardly known—of a wife, gentle, dependent. Who might learn to love a broken man? Who might care to make the sacrifice? And so had grown Joe's eyes, wistful with the sorrow of all renunciation.

The sun sank down behind the nearest hill. The marigolds reflecting its light, the shabby old door of the old house stood open, inviting to his solitary meal.

Then the gate creaked, was drawn noisily back. A young woman stood smiling beneath the maple tree. She looked very much like charming maids he had admired upon magazine covers. She came toward him.

"How do you do?" remarked the maid. "Are you the man who supplies the store in the village with white, fresh eggs?"

Joe, with a recollection of college manner, admitted the fact.

"Then," said the young lady, "may I have a few dozen? They were out at the store and I've driven and walked all the way up. Had to leave my car, you know, where the road stops."

She could not know that Joe's silence was born of joy in the presence of one of that world from which he had been exiled, so she went on in her agreeable voice to explain:

"My father is stopping at the Inn. It's a wretched stopping place. And he is ill; the doctor ordered plenty of milk with eggs. Father," the girl said, "has charge of this engineering project through the mountain."

Joe came to himself. Together the two gathered the eggs—together they robbed the garden of its choicest blooms. And led on by his visitor's interested sympathy and by his pent-up longing, Joe told the story of his disappointment and of his banishment. The blue eyes of the listener were very lovely in their concern.

The following morning found her again at the gate of Joe's garden. Her father, the noted engineer, was with her and they lingered companionably, exchanging confidences.

Autumn's red had changed the mountain trees a second time before the trio again entered between the rows of tangled brush. The shabby house was unoccupied now and echoed silence. The elderly engineer smoked contentedly, while Joe, a broad-shouldered, happy Joe, and the girl of the blue eyes wandered about the familiar place, a joyous dog beside them.

"Think," the young woman said, "if that day I had not happened to come up here for the eggs, I might never have met you. Oh, Joe!"

"But you did come," her husband said, "bringing love and good fortune in your dear hands. For if I don't prove the best assistant engineer your father has ever had—it won't be my fault."

The sun went down victoriously behind the nearest hill. Joe was to have his loneliness no more.

HARTMAN THEATER

No picture that has even been presented in Columbus, not even "The Birth of a Nation" has been received with more enthusiastic acclaim by the thousands who crowd the theater than the much talked of picturization of Emerson Hough's great novel "The Covered Wagon" now playing twice daily at the Hartman theater, Columbus and which the management has decided to continue for another week. In his criticism in the Columbus Dispatch H. E. Cherrington writes: "Covered Wagon is Hartman triumph. So big, so suggestive, so vital and so important we could scarcely grasp the grandeur of it all. "The Covered Wagon" will move you like a burst of sunrise or a flash of heroic banners." Daisy H. Krier in the Ohio State Journal says: "The picture is an inspiration, a clean picture of the days in the late forties. It is worth regular theater prices."

And the critic of the Columbus Citizen has this to say: "Incomparable in its settings and unerring in every detail, 'The Covered Wagon' brings to the screen an inspiration." Matinee and night performances are given daily, including Sunday and mail orders for next week are now being filled in the order of their receipt.

Greasewood Often Is Poisonous to Sheep

Dangerous Feed When Taken in Large Quantities.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Greasewood, a shrubby plant very plentiful on the range in some parts of the West, has been the cause of occasional large losses of sheep. This plant was listed as poisonous 25 years ago, but only recently have investigations been made by the United States Department of Agriculture which brought out definite information concerning the symptoms and the conditions under which poisoning will occur. The results of this work are contained in Department Circular 279, entitled "Greasewood as a Poisonous Plant."

The investigations have established that under most conditions this plant is a good forage for sheep, and dangerous when it is taken in considerable quantities, at least 1.5 pounds to the hundredweight of animal, in a very short time. Losses may be prevented by taking care that sheep do not graze too long on greasewood when they are very hungry. Animals that once show the symptoms usually die; in other words, a quantity of the plant which will cause the symptoms will cause death.

The greasewood plant, which is sometimes known as "chico," is light-green colored, scraggly, with spiny branches and slender, fleshy leaves about 1 1/2 inches long. It is commonly recognized by western stockmen, but there are several other plants sometimes called greasewood.

Copies of the circular may be obtained without cost, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Excellent Ration for Fattening Market Ducks

Ducks are fattened easier and quicker than any other class of poultry, if they are properly fed and handled. Here is an excellent fattening ration: Two parts cornmeal, one part each of wheat bran and middlings, one part ground oats, two parts ground beefscrap. To this add three or four per cent of coarse sand or grit and mix the whole together with milk, sweet or sour. Give them all they will eat of this mixture three times a day, if you are in a big hurry to force them along; or, if you haven't time to do that, give them the mash as often as convenient, and keep dry grains before them in boxes all the time. See that they have plenty of water to drink, and keep it in troughs so that several ducks can partake at the same time. Don't give them too much liberty while fattening them for market, for they fatten quicker in small quiet runs. Ducks are nervous and easily frightened; dogs and loud strangers often cause serious disturbances. A thorough fright will cause a duck to lose more flesh and healthy growth in half an hour than good care and food will restore in several days. That may sound like nonsense, but it's the experience of all who have tried it.

Males Not Needed for Breeding Should Be Sold

Unless your roosters are worth saving for mating purposes, get rid of them. Keep them away from the hens, for infertile eggs will command a premium over the fertile kind. Scrub roosters, and even pure bred cockerels that are not needed for the breeding pens and are not good enough to command a price from other breeders, should be made ready for the market. There is no reason why any farmer or poultryman should go on feeding a lot of useless birds. Put them in a pen and fatten them before sending them to market. Unless too old, you will make a profit on your feed because a fat bird will sell more readily, and of course weighs more. Roosterless farms are not uncommon in some sections of the country.

Laying Age of Pullets of Different Breeds

An observation of the average number of days required to mature Leghorns, Rocks and Reds as handled at the Nebraska college of agriculture shows the following: Single Comb White Leghorns, 205 days; Barred Rocks, 239 days; Single Comb Rhode Island Reds, 250 days. The age at time of laying the first egg was taken as an index of maturity. Therefore, such medium maturing breeds as Rhode Island Reds, Barred and White Rocks, Orpingtons, Langshans, etc., should be hatched as near March 1 as possible if they are to be old enough to lay by November 1, or in time to catch the highest prices of the year. The necessity for early hatching is not so great with Leghorns. They mature so early that April-hatched pullets seem to have the advantage.

Keep Track of Broody Hens of Various Breeds

In dual-purpose breeds, all hens that become broody should be given a celluloid leg band for each offense. It is easy to keep track of them in this way and as those that have frequent broody spells cannot possibly make good records, they should be marketed. Birds that, without having clearly inferior characters, are under suspicion, should be moved to a separate pen and given further trial.

MONDAY CLUB

Interesting Talk by Mrs. Frances Abernethy Reeder—Subject for Year.

The first meeting of the Monday club for the year 1923-1924 was held Monday evening. Mrs. B. K. Clapp, retiring, gave the gavel to Mrs. W. T. Ulm, the incoming president.

The subject of the club calendar for this year is Outstanding Points of Interest in a Trip Around the World—A Study of Places Where History was Made. Monday evening's program was China. Roll call. Interesting facts about China. (1) President's Address; (2) Our Calendar, Mrs. A. L. Wilder; (3) address, Weishien, China, Mrs. Charles Reeder.

In her splendid address, the president dwelt upon what this age is to woman. "Do you realize, what it is to be an American Woman? She dwelt upon the responsibility of woman's new citizenship and the power of that responsibility. Mrs. Reeder disclaiming any pretense of a formal address talked of the Chinese as she knew them. Mrs. Reeder was Miss Frances Abernethy of Circleville before her marriage to Mr. Charles Reeder, a missionary to Weishien, China, and her audience found her very pleasing and charming as she told of the many peculiar customs of this patient, stolid people and of some of the amusing experiences she had had in her life of four years with them.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"Kelly, what do you think of—O' the Hotel Stenographer interrupted herself, "you are chewing gum. You cannot think of anything when you chew gum."

"What were you starting to say?" asked the House Detective.

"I was going to ask you what you thought of the germ theory," said the girl. "It is getting so now that they will not feed a baby milk until they have run it thru the food chopper to kill the germs. If they hadn't robbed the calf for which the milk was intended, but people are getting weaker, or else germs are multiplying. "Old-fashioned people kissed each other early, often and earnestly, and never thought of germs. Now they say of you are not mighty particular whom you kiss you will catch pelegra, or something, altho none of the fellows I hop around with have it.

"There is as much luck catching germs as there is catching husbands. There are good germs, good for what ails you. There are bad ones that make you mighty sick, even when you are healthy. Husbands are like that. Some women marry a good man and blossom like a rose, and others marry bums and go on the fritz, and—"

"Did you say you wanted my opinion about all these things?" interrupted Kelly.

"Yes," said the girl. "Then why don't you give me a chance to say somethin'? You make me think about my wife. She is a dialogue. She asks me questions and then answers them herself."

FOUR FACE DEMPSEY

Two Knocked Out and the Others Are Pounded Mercilessly. Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Four men faced Jack Dempsey, with the result that the champion knocked out a pair of them and pounded around the others in merciless fashion. Dempsey entered the ring with a heavy growth of whiskers and in a surly sort of mood. George West, an English middleweight, was the first victim. Dempsey slammed and jammed West. He plunked him and then bumped him. West planned to go two rounds, but was through after one. Then came Jack Burke. After two rounds Burke climbed through the ropes. The next victim was just getting elated over the score of a few left jabs, when—Wow! Then they brought on Alex Trambits as Frank was carried away. Trambits, who middleweights around the country, hopped about a bit and then Dempsey turned loose a left and a right. They lifted Alex from the kindly ropes.

CHIEF OF TRIBE SACRIFICES SON

South African Youth Burned to Death to Appease Wrath of Great Spirit.

Cincinnati.—Sir Clarkson Tredgold, the senior judge of southern Rhodesia, and a jury were engaged for two days investigating the circumstances in which Manduza, the second surviving son of Chief Chigango, of a section of the Mtwara tribe, was offered up as a sacrifice to appease the wrath of the Mwari (the Great Spirit).

Those charged with the crime of murder included Chigango, the father of the victim; Chiswiti, the paramount chief of the district, whose only proved share of the proceedings was the provision of an escort to carry out the orders of Chigango; Chiriseri, a headman of a neighboring kraal, and four "police boys," or priests, who, acting on orders, carried out the ceremony. The paramount chief was found not guilty and discharged; the others were found guilty and sentenced to death. In passing sentence the judge announced that he would support the strong recommendation to mercy with which the jury has coupled their verdict, says Henri Pickard in the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Crops Burned by Sun.

In January last the Mtwara tribe, in common with others, saw their crops being destroyed by a scorching sun and starvation staring them in the face. Suspicion fell on Manduza—that he had angered the Great Spirit—and his father ordered that he should be put to death with all the customary ceremony. It came out in evidence that Chigango could not trust his own people to execute this decree, and obtained an escort of about seventy from Chiswiti, so that the victim should not allow his courage to fail and seek safety in flight.

Manduza was conveyed in the night to Chiswiti's "sitting place." Instructions came from Chigango that his son should be sacrificed. An eyewitness of the scene described how Manduza's hands were bound with a limbo, specially kept for such occasions, and was then carried by the "police boys" to a place where a wood fire had been prepared. The man was laid on the pyre and further timber placed over him. It did not transpire that he offered any resistance. By daybreak nothing remained but a pile of ashes and human bones, from which the flesh had been burned.

Chief's Son Notifies Police.

In the meantime Chigango's second son, who heard what had happened to his brother, and evidently feared that he might be marked out for the same fate, went to the police post at Mount Darwin and reported the occurrence. A police trooper and four native police boys visited the scene, made certain inquiries, and marched 80 natives, who seemed to have been concerned in the case, to Mount Darwin, where the investigations were continued and the preliminary examination held. In a statement made on that occasion by one of those afterward placed on trial, the following passage occurred: "I admit we were caught, and are now to die for the fault of our chief and headman. Chigango came to Chiriseri and told him he wanted him to take and burn his son, Manduza. Chiriseri refused to do so, saying that we were under the white people's rule now, Chigango said: 'I burnt Mgurakoko and Manyondi, and the white people have not heard, and they will not hear of this.' The statement as to two previous sacrifices having taken place in recent years at the same site is believed to be true.

The Rhodesian police and law departments have had to deal with a considerable number of charges of murder arising out of witchcraft and the machination of witch doctors, or the outcome of deep-rooted tribal superstition, but this is the first instance in which they have been able to obtain evidence of human sacrifice in accordance with old-established rites.

Rained "Diamonds" in This Man's Back Yard

London.—Does it ever rain diamonds?

C. P. Fitzgerald, expert metallurgist, is seriously asking this question. During a recent thunderstorm there fell in his garden several meteorites weighing about six pounds each, and so hard that fragments of them will cut glass.

Fitzgerald said the meteorites exactly resemble the diamond-bearing quartz found in South Africa, and he has sent his finds to a laboratory for examination.

The "Pied Piper of Hamlin," who led rats into the river by music, has a rival in the person of Bert Mobgers, dam tender, of Appleton, Wis.

Bert, for many moons while working on the dam, was pestered by too friendly rats. They would crawl about his legs.

The "Pied Piper" of Appleton now throws lye on the boards about the dam. The lye clings to the wet feet of the rats and burns them. The rats then commit suicide by licking their feet.

RUHR DEADLOCK TO BE BROKEN

France and Germany to Reach an Agreement.

DIPLOMATS ON THE SITUATION

Berlin's Reported Surrender in Ordering Cessation of Passive Resistance Forecasts an Understanding, They Say—German Surrender Held a Vindication of Premier Poincare's Policy—Promise From Paris.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Germany's reported surrender in ordering the cessation of passive resistance in the Ruhr valley forecasts a Franco-German agreement, restoring industrial activity in central Europe, according to the view held here by Washington diplomats.

While there was no official confirmation of news dispatches telling of the orders from Berlin to the Ruhr population, events during the past week had prepared officials and diplomats for news indicating that some understanding had been reached between the French and German governments.

The reported instructions from Berlin putting an end to passive resistance are regarded here as evidence that the Franco-German negotiations have reached a stage where an agreement may be expected.

Washington is convinced that Chancellor Stresemann in Berlin has been dealing with the French in an effort to break the Ruhr deadlock. Representatives of the two countries, it is felt certain, have been particularly active during the last few days. News from both Berlin and Paris has indicated that Germans and French alike were being prepared for the announcement of some understanding relative to the Ruhr.

So long as there was the possibility of early action by Great Britain the German government avoided direct negotiation with the Poincare ministry in Paris. Conditions in the empire, however, demanded a solution of the Ruhr problem, and the Stresemann cabinet apparently felt compelled to deal with France in order to obtain some relief.

Despite the critical situation in Germany, it is felt, Berlin would not have ordered the cessation of passive resistance without having received some promise from Paris. This promise, it is believed, must be directly concerned with the terms which France will grant to her prostrate foe.

The German surrender is a vindication of the Poincare policy and is regarded here as another blow to British prestige on the continent. Like other nations on the continent, Germany has found that she must reckon first with France, the dominant military power.

In Berlin it is said the situation is not cleared by the report of the Ruhr action taken by the German trades unions in settling definite conditions on which they will abandon their campaign of passive resistance. Those conditions include the return to the occupied regions of all those who were deported, with their families; the release of all prisoners held by the French, and an agreement that reparations must be fixed within the bounds of possible payment.

WARD TO GO ON TRIAL

State to Charge Blackmailing Plot, According to Report.

White Plains, N. Y., Sept. 11.—The sensational charge that Walter S. Ward planned to blackmail his father and that he slew Clarence Peters, the ex-marine, in the belief that Peters was a detective sent by the elder Ward to stop the blackmail plot, is expected to be the basis of the state's case against Ward when the murder trial opens here tomorrow.

The trial of Ward will come as the culmination of months of effort on the part of Ward, backed by his father's millions, to prevent the case coming to trial.

George S. Ward, president of the Ward Baking company, married a nurse, Mrs. Donn Laester, a pretty widow of 39, who had attended his first wife in her fatal illness in 1921. The marriage came a few months after Mrs. Ward died. George Ward was then past 50.

SELL-OUT CENTRAL.

Capacity Crowd to See the Dempsey-Firpo Fight.

New York, Sept. 11.—Over one million dollars' worth of tickets have been already sold for the Dempsey-Firpo fight this coming Friday night. There is no question of a sell-out, and indications are that more than twice the 85,000 capacity of the Polo grounds could be filled. The $25, $40 and $50 seats are all gone, so tremendous has been the demand, and only $20 and $15 reserve tickets, roughly estimated at $2,000,000 worth, remain, together with 20,000 general $3 admission tickets to be put on sale at the grounds Friday afternoon. Dempsey's share is figured to run between $100,000 and $200,000, while Firpo is expected to cut in for between $125,000 and $150,000.

Navies Depend on Chance.

London, Sept. 11.—The disaster to the American destroyer flotilla Sunday is the most extraordinary happening in naval history," says the London Daily News in an editorial. "In the space of a few minutes the American navy suffered a loss greater than it did during the whole period of the war," continues the editorial, which concludes: "The reflection suggested by this regrettable misfortune is the dependence on chance by even the best equipped and most ably commanded modern naval units. A sudden storm catching the British fleet at a disadvantage might in a single day reduce us from a first-class to a third-class power."

COOLIDGE FAVORS WORLD COURT

First Commitment from President On the Question.

TO PRESS HARDING POLICIES

Coolidge Expected to Resubmit Proposal For American Membership in the World Court to the Senate When It Convenes—Chicago Likely to Entertain Republican National Convention.

Washington, Sept. 11.—President Coolidge favors America's entry into the world court.

This declaration was made at the white house by the Rev. Dr. William E. Barton of Oak Park, Ill., moderator of the 'Congregational church of the United States, immediately following a lengthy conference with the president. It was the first commitment on this question, either directly or indirectly, from the president since he assumed the executive office.

Dr. Barton declared that the president clearly gave him to understand that he intends to follow out the policies of President Harding on the world court and a general declaration that the Harding policies will be carried through was intended to include this subject. Dr. Barton, who heads the religious denomination of which the president and his family are communicants, is an ardent advocate both of the league of nations and the world court.

It is believed that President Coolidge will resubmit the Harding-Hughes proposal for American membership in the world court to the senate when it convenes in December.

Chairman Adams of the Republican national committee saw the president for the first time since his return to Washington last week. Following his conference he announced that the national committee will be called to meet in Washington the second week in December to fix the time and place of the 1924 national convention. At that time all cities bidding for the meeting will be given full opportunity to present their claims, the chairman said. Chicago appears to have the best look in. Fred Upham, treasurer of the national committee, already is said to claim enough advance pledges to insure Chicago's selection. Cleveland appears the most aggressive contender with Chicago. Ohioans are urging that city as a tribute to the late President Harding.

DESTROYERS SWEEP ON ROCKY COAST

Quake and Tidal Wave May Have Caused the Disaster.

Washington, Sept. 11.—Reports to the navy department failed to establish with any degree of definiteness the cause of the stranding of the seven destroyers, which were swept on the rocks of southern California coast late Sunday night.

A reaction from the Japanese earthquake and tidal wave was advanced by high naval officials as a possible cause of the disaster. Confusion of the radio signals or changes in the tides, resulting from the seismic disturbance across the Pacific, were also suggested as having been partly responsible for the greatest peace time casualty in the navy's history. "We don't know but some agitation due to the earthquake and tidal wave may have caused it," Secretary Denby said. "It may have been a tidal wave that hit them."

Within the past week, following the disaster in Japan, reports have been received from the Pacific coast of heavy seas and high waves which have been observed at points along the shore. According to high naval opinion, these disturbances may have been encountered by the destroyer fleet, throwing the vessels off their course and laying them at the mercy of swift tides which had been previously unknown along that part of the coast.

Tear bombs subjugated Walter Cochran, alleged maniac, who shot his wife, his mother-in-law and two policemen and stood off the entire police force for four hours behind the barricaded doors of his home in Bellefonte, Ill.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Donahay to Aid Veterans.

Springfield, O., Sept. 11.—Governor Donahay pledged his "complete cooperation, aid and support in obtaining relief and justice for the disabled veterans of the world war." The governor uttered the pledge here in an address before the state convention of the American Legion. He said he had been requested to name a "gold star" mother from Ohio to represent the state at the convention of American War Mothers at Kansas City the latter part of the month. "I desire to ask your organization to select that mother and inform me of your choice," he said.

Shearer and Hoskins on Trial.

Cleveland, Sept. 11.—The trial of Joseph A. Shearer of Columbus, former federal prohibition agent; Samuel A. Hoskins, also of Columbus; and A. Frank Counts of Cleveland, charged with conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law, began before Federal Judge D. C. Westenhaver. Among the charges against the defendants are allegations that they directly or indirectly received large sums of money declared to have been paid by the Aurbachs to prevent official interference with their illegal activities.

Charges Against Mayor.

Columbus, Sept. 11.—Mayor William Lodge of Silver Lake, Summit county, may be called before Governor Donahay to explain charges of misfeasance in office which have been leveled against him, the governor indicated. The affidavits against Lodge charge that he was in the habit of issuing search warrants and affidavits for arrest signed in blank, letting his deputy marshals fill in the names and descriptions. It is alleged also that deputy marshals working for Lodge "settled cases out of court."

Go Over Embankment.

East Liverpool, O., Sept. 11.—Five persons were injured, one probably fatally, when the automobile in which they were riding went over an embankment while descending a hill, about four miles east of here. John E. Sciallette, 38, sustained a broken back.

Victims of Machines.

Cleveland, Sept. 11.—Eleanor Rogers was killed when an automobile in which she was riding overturned. Henry Nakel and Thomas Cloonan, each aged 40, died from injuries sustained when they were struck by automobiles.

Back Broken.

Chillicothe, O., Sept. 11.—James Williams, negro of Portsmouth, is in a hospital here with a broken back as a result of an automobile skidding and going into a ditch near here. Five other negro occupants of the car escaped with minor injuries.

Steamer Sinks.

Gallipolis, O., Sept. 11.—Pittsburgh and Cincinnati packet steamer "General Wood" struck rocks in the Ohio river below Dam 20 and sank. Passengers and crew reached shore safely. The steamer was valued at $90,000.

Girl Dies of Burns.

Marietta, O., Sept. 11.—Helen Stevens, 14, died from burns received in an explosion in the cellar of her home when accumulated gas ignited from the match which she had struck while looking for fruit.

Four convicts set fire to the penitentiary stables at Kingston, Ont., and during the confusion scaled the walls and escaped in a stolen automobile. Guards on the walls fired at them but missed.

WATER SYSTEM IS RESTORED

Long Step Toward Checkmating Plague Menace.

FOOD NOW MORE PLENTIFUL

Relief Work Gradually Overcoming Distress Caused by the Earthquake and Fire in Japan—China Responds Nobly to Urgent Calls For Relief. Order Prevails in the Wrecked Cities.

Shanghai, Sept. 11.—Ten days have elapsed since the cities of Tokio and Yokohama were almost completely wiped out by the earthquake and fire.

Relief work is gradually overcoming the distress suffered by the millions of Japanese and hundreds of Americans and other foreigners.

Food is at last becoming more plentiful. Every train and ship arriving in the stricken zone is docking its quota of supplies. The public parks of the capital city and the nation's famous seaport city resemble huge military barracks. Here countless thousands are being temporarily housed and fed.

First reports of the total casualties now appear to have been greatly exaggerated, but it is more than likely that the exact number of lives lost will never be known. Thousands of victims, injured in the collapse of their homes, were unable to escape and were cremated in the fiery whirlwind which swept the two cities and surrounding suburbs.

At this writing the death list in Tokio alone is conservatively estimated at between 25,000 and 30,000. The estimates of dead and injured at Yokohama varies from 30,000 to 100,000. No official figures are obtainable.

Japanese residents in China, foreigners and Chinese immediately responded to the urgent calls from Tokio and Yokohama for relief. As fast as double crews can load ships with rice, Japan's principal foodstuff, they are dispatched to the stricken sections.

Order prevails in Tokio and Yokohama, reports of late looting and pillaging to the contrary, according to official word received here by the Japanese consulate.

With the restoration of the water system a long step toward checkmating the possibilities of plague has been made, according to a statement received here from the home minister at Tokio. It is expected that the cholera and dysentery menace will be sufficiently checked to prevent the scourge of plague.

KILLS WIFE AND SELF

Friends of the Couple Tell Story of Dual Tragedy.

Scituate, Mass., Sept. 11.—She had a million. He didn't have a dime. She was older than he. She knew he was unfaithful and she was getting ready to divorce him. He demanded $150,000 not to contest the divorce. She refused. He killed her, and then himself.

That is the story of the murder and suicide that happened in the big house called "Brookwood," where Hilary Peter Discher, veteran of the Philippine war and ex-army aviator, shot and killed his wife, Elsie Cheney Discher of the Cheney silk family, as told by friends of the Dischers, who had been spending a merry week-end at the big house and were awakened by the fatal shots.

Royal Marriage Arranged.

Brussels, Sept. 11.—Princess Marie Josef, daughter of the king and queen of Belgium, will marry the crown prince of Italy.

HAS SORE RIGHT ARM

Luis Firpo the Center of Concern, but He Is Not Worried.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 11.—Luis Angel Firpo was the center of concerned eyes when an ugly looking eruption appeared on his best bet, the mauling right arm. His manager was worried, and so was everybody else, everybody but Luis Angel. The sore, located at about the center of the back of the arm between the elbow and shoulder, originally was a rope burn caused by Luis' playful habit of literally bounding back from the ropes of the ring while boxing with his partners. Such a sore in Dempsey's camp would cause a rush of specialists from New York and elsewhere, but Luis Angel just told Washington, his negro rubber, to put a little more horse liniment and goose grease on the arm after work-out.

SOLAR PHOTOS TAKEN

Big Fog Bank Eclipses the Eclipse of the Sun.

San Diego, Cal., Sept. 11.—The solar eclipse of 1923 was wrecked on the biggest fog bank that has blotted the escutcheon of California climate for September in the weather annals. The eclipse, therefore, was total in a double sense, although the astronomical totality was a matter of faith and imagination somewhat.

Lieutenant John A. MacReady, the famous transcontinental army flier, and Captain A. W. Stevens, most expert of army air photographers, dropped to Rockwell field with the sad words, "nothing doing." They had just returned from a flight to the center of the path of totality east of Escondido, Lower California.

"We went to 16,300 feet," said MacReady, "but there were still clouds above us. There was no prospect of getting above the black masses. Also with only three and a half minutes of totality there was no time."

Lieutenant Leland Webb and Chief Photographer Haas of the naval air station rode through the fog and clouds to a height of 16,500 feet and there, circling serenely in the brilliant sky, they spent three and a half minutes taking motion pictures of the corona and phenomena.

Reds Active in Berlin.

Berlin, Sept. 11.—Berlin has been placarded with "Spartacus Letter No. 4," which contains a report on Sunday's shopmen's congress and boasts that the Prussian government was outwitted. The proclamation declares that Chancellor Stresemann and the present government must be overthrown, and that the sole salvation of Germany is a soviet republic closely allied with Russia. The letter demands the summoning of a national shops council congress. The preceding "three Spartacus letters" obviously were circulated surreptitiously throughout the workingmen's sections as a substitute for the "Rote Ranne," which was suppressed four days ago.

PLANE BREAKS RECORD

Flies 238 Miles an Hour in a Test Flight in the East.

New York, Sept. 11.—A new world's record for airplane speed was set when the navy Wright flier, which will represent the navy in the Pulitzer race at St. Louis next month, flew 238 miles an hour in a test flight at Mineola, L. I. The best previous mile was made by Sadi Lecoq, French flier, in Paris, Feb. 15 last. The new record was made in a straight-away flight, without the advantage of a dive from altitude for a start, and was closely timed. Lieutenant L. H. Sanderson, who drove the record mile, will carry the navy's colors at the Pulitzer event, Oct. 1, 2 and 3.

Soviet Gives Up Bessarabia.

Helsingfors, Sept. 11.—The soviet government has agreed to give up its claim to Bessarabia to Roumania. The Dniester river will be the new frontier.

GIRL USES HER HAT AS BANK

Can Draw Against Depository on the Top of Her Head Any Old Time She Likes.

It was already time to start for the theater. But Kathleen took her best hat down from the crowded closet shelf and frantically began to rip at the lining.

"But, my dear," her friend reminded, "there isn't time to make over your hat tonight. What are you doing?"

By this time Kathleen had got her hand in under the lining and had extracted—a $5 bill, relates the New York Sun and Globe.

"What an amazing hat," remarked her friend. "It seems to be like the miraculous pitcher in which there was always sustenance."

But the girl who has lived two years in a New York apartment and whose salary is given her in a little sealed envelope on the 1st and 15th of each month, explained: "You see, I can't possibly afford a bank account. There isn't any burglar-proof place in this apartment. I always lose my pocketbook. And I'm always running out of change in the most heartless places. So there came the idea of making my hats depositories. I keep $5 or $10 in each chapeau. In this way I always have money with me. And what robber would think of looking there for loot? And, best of all, I often forget how much I have and think it is all gone—when, lo, I find $10 in the far edge of some lining."

"The only objection is once I gave a hat away without examining the crown. And ever since I have been about $10 short."

She Wanted Another.

Edith visited the new arrival at my home, and was told that an airplane dropped it on the roof of a hospital and that the doctor brought it up. Before Edith reached home, she saw an airplane and cried out, to the amazement of passersby: "Please, mister, drop one, drop one."—Exchange.

FINDING HERSELF

By LOUISE M. ADDELSON

(© 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

SLOWLY the bandage was unwound. Elizabeth's heart thumped loudly. Out of the shrouding blackness objects began to unfold themselves. That loving face with dumb anxiety written in every fine wrinkle was—unmistakably—the face of the mother she had never seen. And the kindly stranger who held her hand was, of course, Dr. Harvey Whitehill, the famous young surgeon. She stared at them for a long, trembling interval, and bent her head, weeping.

"I can see!" she said. "Oh, how wonderful it is to see!"

Two years later Dr. Harvey Whitehill, after a strenuous day in the office, found a girl cuddled in a corner of his library sofa.

The doctor's tired eyes brightened. "Elizabeth! What a delightful surprise!"

"I have to come in every once in a while to tell you how happy I am," explained Elizabeth.

"If you are as happy as you look—"

"Far, far happier."

He seated himself beside her. "Some tales I hear about you! Leading lady of the newest comic opera! But who could resist such a glorious voice—and such a glorious girl!"

"I have such a lot to tell you, Dr. Harvey. My new opera opens tonight, and promises to make me rich and famous. I have procured a delightful little apartment for mother and myself, and some gowns that are perfect dreams. Last, but not least, three perfectly charming gentlemen have asked me to marry them."

"Throw them all over and marry me," suggested the doctor.

Tears came into Elizabeth's eyes. "If I found it possible to sacrifice one bit of my beautiful new existence, doctor dear, it would be for you. But I'm very, very selfish, I'm afraid. My sole desire is to live—and to forget—the darkness from which you liberated me."

"You certainly created a sensation, Elizabeth," said Mr. George Barrows, soberly, the following night across the restaurant table at which they sat. "I'm sorry you made such a hit."

Elizabeth's eyes, brilliant with excitement, widened. "And I thought you'd be glad!"

"A famous operatic star will never marry me."

She smiled wistfully. "If I did people would say I was marrying you for your money."

Elizabeth's hand, light as thistle-down, touched his sleeve. "Dear George Porgie!" she said, softly. "Most of the things we want are bad for us. I would be bad for you."

"You couldn't be. You—you are wonderful, Elizabeth. I feel very small and humble before you."

A buzz rose in the room, and the sound of a newsboy shrieking. The buzz grew louder. Barrows asked a passing waiter what the trouble was.

"An accident, sir. Several people killed. Doctor Whitehill, the eye specialist—"

"Doctor Whitehill!" Elizabeth rose, white and shaking. "Killed! Oh, my dear, dear Doctor Harvey! Take me to him, George, quick, oh, quick!"

Barrows guided her to his machine. "I didn't know—I didn't think—"

A Japanese servant admitted them to the doctor's apartment. They had barely time to look around before the doctor appeared, a look of pleased astonishment on his face as he saw Elizabeth.

"My dear girl! What is the trouble? Are you ill?"

Elizabeth jumped into his arms with a sobbing cry. "Dear doctor, they told me you were dead!"

"They did? Well, I'm very much alive, thank you! There was an accident. I was in the crowd, and they sort of got the facts mixed. Why, Elizabeth! It's worth dying for, to be wept over like this!"

Elizabeth clung to him, frantically. "Don't—don't leave me! I—I want to stay with you always. Can—can we get married—tonight?"

His arms about her, Doctor Whitehill regarded her intently for a long moment before he spoke.

"Honey, I want you—more than anything in life, but I'll not take advantage of a moment of hysteria to get you. Your career—your singing—"

"My career—my singing—they mean nothing. Hereafter I shall sing only for you. I have but one desire—to be with you—sustain you, so that you can bring light to others—as you brought it to me. So, you stupid darling, dashing a few tears away, 'don't talk so much. You can't get rid of me. You had better go out and find somebody to marry us.'"

"If you please," said the depressed and forgotten George Barrows, "my auto waits outside. Since I can't serve in any other capacity, will you allow me to be your chauffeur, or perchance your best man, as you may need one tonight?"

"Poor George Porgie!" said Elizabeth. "Harvey, meet the dearest man in the world, next to you. If I didn't love you so much I certainly would have married him."

The two men shook hands heartily, after which the three went forth into the night in search of a marriage license and a minister.

An Added Beneficiary.

A news item says that American women spent $150,000,000 last year on cosmetics.

"Her face is my fortune," says the manufacturer.

One in Peculiarities.

Chinese medicine developed a special remedy for fossilized "dragon bones" derived from extinct herbivora. They are also fond of "dragon teeth," as fossilized shells are called. In Shantung glue is made from asses' skins. In a certain town of that province is a well, the water of which, when drunk by asses, makes their skins especially good for making glue. This glue brings a fancy price, as it is a famous tonic throughout China.

Beware of Apologizing.

Apologizing—a very desperate habit—one that is rarely cured. Apologizing is only egotism wrong side out. Nine times out of ten, the first thing a man's companion knows of his shortcomings is from his apology.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

X-Ray Detects Swallowed Coins.

In the government mint in Japan an X-ray machine is used to examine suspected employees as they leave the establishment daily, and it has revealed the presence of coins that had been concealed in the guilty one's stomach.

Shoes in Colors Match the Dress

Various Tones Used Singly
and in Combination With Others.

Footmakers are among the most versatile people in the world. Even the dressmaker of today, notes a Paris fashion writer in the New York Tribune, is scarcely able to keep pace with the modern shoemaker in clever ideas. There apparently is no end to the original things that he can do.

The colors seen in shoes naturally follow those in dresses. All the gray and brown tones are used singly and in combination with one another. The grays range from the shade known as silver gray to smoke color, and the browns from fawn to the darker cocoa shades. Other is particularly popular at the present time.

In the novelty class are shoes made of bright-colored kid. It has been some time since slippers of colored kid were worn to any extent. All the greens, reds and browns seen in dresses are reflected in the newest footwear of this sort. Not every woman will have the courage to appear in shoes of bright green or red, but the dark blue and bottle green shades will no doubt become popular, even with the more conservative woman. Colored kid is used for trimmings, such as tongues, inserted strips and heels, as well as for entire shoes.

To start an epidemic of color in clothes is like upsetting hundreds of dye pots. Even as far-reaching as shoes is the influence of bright-colored prints, which show no sign of waning.

At the recent International Silk exposition representatives of the exclusive shoe shops of America were to be found mingling in the booths searching for printed materials from which to make shoes for the coming summer.

Cut-steel shoe ornaments are having a tremendous vogue in Paris at the present time. So great is the demand for these that manufacturers are charging as high as 250 francs for a pair of shoe buckles, and the retail price is often double this.

These ornaments are in oval and in closed designs. They are so large that they exaggerate the size of the foot, especially since they are placed directly on the instep of the high-tongue or galter style of shoe.

A season of great extravagance in all forms of shoe buckles and tongue ornaments made of cut steel, rhinestones and bronze is upon us. This probably sounds the knell of the strap slipper of sandal type. If the strap remains, the chic of the shoe must lie in a buckle or similar ornament. Gold tassels or pendant ornaments studded with brilliants are seen on the newest evening slippers.

Two Extremes Noted in the Smart Frocks

Smart frocks seem to go to either of two extremes. They may stress one tone or introduce bright touches of color. There's a feeling for odd bits of color in spring models. Sometimes it's narrow strips of colored embroidery down the back and front. Sometimes, again, these odd inserted strips appear at the sides where the seams of the frock would be.

In an ultrasmart dress of dark navy cloth, crystal beads make the only bit of color. They appear in several slender lines about the bateau neck and sparkle into a dashing design at the front.

Black and White Used in Chic Sports Outfit

A new idea in sports wear is this combination of black and white checked worsted coat, with a white flannel skirt, knife-plaited. To complete the outfit goes a white hat with green and black trim.

Dinner Dress Import Is of Crepe Romaine

This artistic dinner dress of apricot crepe romaine, with a broad silver stripe and banded with platinum fox, shows a smartly draped cape of the same material, to be worn, if desired, with the gown.

How the French Women Arrange Their Coiffure

No matter what her style of hair-dressing may be, the French woman permits her features to show. She may draw a lock of hair out to cover her ears, but she never permits her hair to look frizzly. Almost all French women use brilliantine and brush the hair back from the temples. This gives them a sleek and well-groomed appearance. The French woman also wears her hair low enough on the back of her head to take care of the stray locks, for the straggling "scolding lock" is a blemish to the otherwise smart-appearing woman. She never can look well with these stray hairs at the nape of her neck.

The last word in hairdressing shows the hair uncured and drawn away from the ears as in opposition to the much waved and puffed coiffure which has been in vogue for several years. The psyche knot at the nape of the neck is fashionable for evening. Most hairdressers give the effect of a plain and almost precise arrangement, thus serving as a foil for handsome head-dresses.

A hairdressing which makes a charming frame for the face shows the hair drawn back to the crown of the head, the ends curled and wound carefully around a large comb, giving the effect of smoke curling up into the air.

The increasing variety of coiffures accounts for the vast number of hair ornaments now being shown. It would seem that every conceivable type of hair ornament of all ages has been revived or used as a basis for some newer design.

Fur Coats Are to Be Slimmer Next Season

Fur coats will be slim next year, if we are to believe what designers say. This season's coats and capes have been rather voluminous, falling in full lines from shoulder to hem. The present French styles, however, are far more slender in silhouette than ours and we will undoubtedly be following their lines next season.

Already importers are showing advance models based upon French imports with long, slender lines. It is presumed that the long skirt vogue will continue throughout the coming year, hence advance models all concentrate on the 51-inch length, with a decided tendency toward the narrow ankle line. In some cases the ankle line is so scant that inside straps and under lacings are provided to make walking more comfortable.

Coats and dolmans are gaining over the cape for daytime wear. The cape with the side slits for the arms will probably remain staple for evening wear.

One-Piece Dresses in Gay, Peasant Coloring

Little one-piece dresses for children are made with embroidery at the top of the hem, around the neck and where the frock opens in front, over the shoulders and around the sleeves in gay, peasant coloring. The materials used are light colored linens. Some dresses are embroidered with round or oblong medallion designs, and when the linen is white heavy linen lace is scantily quilted around the medallions. Fudge aprons, tea aprons and fancy work aprons all come in for their share of embroidery, and some of them are very original and attractive. One in old blue linen had oblong, embroidered motifs in white and gay colors, and around each motif a little crocheted linen lace was quilted, which gave a very foreign effect to the work.

Summer Mode.
A gown which, owing to its present popularity, will be repeated during the summer months, is the long bodiced organdie frock with the full skirt trimmed in bands of wide velvet ribbon of a shade darker than the organdie. Ribbon forms the tiny sleeves and outlines the rounded neck. In grayish blue this gown would be most attractive for summer afternoon affairs.

PUBLIC INVITATION.

The old boys of '61—members of Circleville's own, the 114th O. V. I. respectfully asks the public to meet with them at their campfire at the Memorial hall Wednesday evening at seven o'clock. This is the anniversary of the regiment and there are only a few of the boys left and those here would be pleased to meet you. Everybody that can get away Wednesday evening, come and give the "old boys" a rousing welcome. 10septd2.

Atmospheric Action.

The atmosphere of the earth acts very much in the same way as does the glass of a greenhouse—it allows the rays of the sun to pass through, but imprisons the heat. Thus it is cooler on the top of a mountain than at the sea level, because though the mountain top is nearer the sun, the atmosphere is much less dense.

Taught by Experience.

THRIFT and EDUCATION

We think that "Thrift" should be as much the part of the American child's education as arithmetic, geography and spelling.

Doesn't it sound rather inconsistent to teach all the fine points about MAKING MONEY without saying a word about how to TAKE CARE OF IT after it is made.

A good way to teach thrift, is for each and every parent to see that his child has a Savings Account in this solid institution.

Such a step will have a beneficial influence on the child's future character.

YOUNG REPLY

Received From Dr. William Carson—
Will Attend Centennial.

A very young reply has been received from Dr. William Carson, last pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, of Circleville, to the invitation sent him to be present at the Centennial. It was brief and to the point and reads as follows: "Invitation received. Much obliged. All right; you may count on me for the sixteenth. Fraternally, William Carson."

It will be recalled by quite a number of citizens that while there were two Presbyterian churches in Circleville Rev. Carson was the pastor of the Central church, the building of which is now being used by the Noecker Motor Co. When the two churches united Rev. Carson became pastor of the united church in the building of the "First" church the church then being called "The Presbyterian church" of Circleville. While Dr. Carson preceded Dr. Stratton as a pastor he is a somewhat younger man and now is honorably retired living in Indianapolis, Indiana.

Was Late With Her Gossip.

Mrs. Doherty was the gossip of the suburb of Wimblesyead, and whenever any of her neighbors met her they always prepared to receive a nice tit-bit of scandal about some of their friends.

Mrs. Gadabout loved gossip nearly as much as did Mrs. Doherty, and so she was extremely pleased when she saw the latter lady coming along in her direction one morning when she was out shopping.

"Did you tell Mrs. Newife that you saw her husband in town with a strange woman?" Mrs. Gadabout asked when they had exchanged greetings.

"Yes," was the reply, "and I wish I hadn't now. She just smiled at me in her wise way and said: 'Yes, I knew all about that. My husband saw you and knew you'd come straight back to tell me, so he telephoned the news to me himself.'"

TEST NEVER FAILS

First Act in the Morning Proves Character.

Just How Man Conducts Himself
When Alarm Clock Wakes Him
Is the Revelation.

If you want to know a man's character through and through, there are two methods. You can either see him daily for ten years, or you can observe him for ten minutes just after his alarm clock has rung in the morning.

The man who will succeed identifies himself before the tiny clamor has really begun. Throwing back the bed clothes he leaps to the floor, strangles the clock and goes right to work on his setting-up exercises. Such a man is an asset in any office and a criminal nuisance anywhere else, remarks the New York Sun and Globe. He will never be late to work, he will grin cheerfully when asked to stay after 5 o'clock, he will talk about the stock market, to a poet or a beautiful woman, and his idea of a vacation is to get up at 6 o'clock and get an early start for the six-hour climb of the nearest mountain.

Then there is another type, who never allows the alarm to ring more than a few seconds. He is almost as able as the man who will succeed, almost as ambitious, but he is human; he is late once every six months or so, and he has to stifle harsh words that rise to his lips when he is asked "Just to finish those up before you go," he often likes to forget his business altogether, and he appreciates a quiet morning with a pipe and a book. You can spot him, because he walks across the room to the clock. He is not superhuman and he is a little bit afraid that if his reveille call is within reach of the bed he will be tempted to turn it off and go to sleep again.

Coming down the scale is the man who wakes promptly, but after turning the indicator to "off," says to himself: "I guess I can dress and eat breakfast in forty minutes," and lies in bed for a luxurious five minutes, which he sometimes stretches to six or seven minutes. He is the average man, never discharged, occasionally late, and seldom promoted. He works with reasonable diligence in office hours, but always has a pressing engagement at quarter past five which prevents his working overtime, although he "wishes he could and will stay late any other day."

Of course, in the abyss, there is the lethargic animal who has not even energy enough to silence the alarm. He has set it the night before to give him time to bathe, dress and breakfast in leisure, but he does not stir as the alarm rings itself out nor for half an hour or so afterward. Even then, his mother, his wife, his sister, or his roommate, has to pull off the bed clothes and shout in his ear before he will get up, throw on his clothes, and run for the subway with a piece of toast in his hand.

His business career is obvious. Late several times a week, he spends the day reading a paper, wishing he could get a better job, and asking the boss for a raise. He usually lasts about six months in each office.

But happiest of men is he who has no alarm clock at all, whose wife taps him on the shoulder at quarter past 7, saying, "Time to get up, dear. Your bath is waiting and breakfast is almost ready. Do you want your eggs scrambled or fried?"

Motor in Near East.

Ninety per cent of all automobiles in Syria and Palestine are of American make. Palestine is a transformed territory. It is no longer a pastoral land untouched by modern life. American agricultural machines are there, and whereas before the war it took four days to journey from Jerusalem to Nazareth, it can now be done in four hours.

There is a motor car service between Beirut and Haifa, and between Haifa and Damascus. This route brings Bagdad within sixty miles land journey throughout Syria, Palestine, Mesopotamia and in certain parts of trans-Jordan and Arabia the American motor cars now link up remote communities and provide cheaper and more comfortable travel than by rail.

Odd Experience.

One day we were ready to go to town on an errand and our car refused to start. My husband tried everything he could think of, but to no avail. Next morning we hitched the team to the car and dragged it to our village garage, five miles away. I went along to guide the car. Thinking something was seriously wrong, we tied our buggy on behind to come home in. To our surprise the mechanic cranked the car twice and it started nicely. Just a little water had gotten in during a rain storm, and when it dried out nothing was wrong. We did feel foolish.—Chicago Journal.

United States' Wood Consumption.

The United States uses more wood than any other country. In fact the consumption in this country equals about two-fifths of the entire consumption of the world, or, expressed in round figures, about 22½ billion cubic feet, declares the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture.

The per capita consumption in this country is 122 cubic feet, of which 110 cubic feet, or a little more than half, is saw timber, and the balance consists of cordwood, continues the department's report, which was recently printed for public distribution.

Red Leader Warns Workers.

Berlin, Sept. 11.—"If the masses of workmen don't join our ranks soon, I do not hesitate to give notice that I will drag them out of their houses by force, if necessary. Workingmen have only a few days in which to volunteer, and if they don't they will be commanded with the bayonet to volunteer." This was the striking part of an address made to the Saxon socialist and communist "organizations for self-defense" by their commander at the parade grounds at Dresden.

Ruhr Workers' Terms.

Cologne, Sept. 11.—The chairman of the Essen German trades unions announces that the passive resistance in the Ruhr will be abandoned on three conditions: The return to their homes of all those who have been deported from the occupied regions, with their families; release of all prisoners; the summary rejection of any attempt to infringe on the sovereign rights of the reich and the revocation of all laws which limit the acceptance of economic reparations, with liability fixed within bounds possible of fulfillment.

Mussolini Again Balks.

London, Sept. 11.—It is learned here that Premier Mussolini now refuses to accept the understanding reached by the ambassadors' conference Friday last that Corfu be evacuated by Italy as soon as Greece has accepted in full the decision of the conference by paying £500,000 into court. Mussolini argues that there will be no evacuation of Corfu until all the proceedings connected with the Janina murders are terminated. The British government declines to accept this interpretation and in the event of Mussolini not receding from his attitude insists that the matter come up at Geneva for the league of nations' decision.

Ancient Signs Asked Votes.

The use of chalked instead of printed notices for advertisement and political propaganda has ancient precedent, as the "graffiti" of Pompeii attest. There we find in red letters painted on the walls that "the barbers wish to have Trebius as aedile" or that "the fruit sellers wish one conlus Priscus for the duumvirate."

YEARS AND YEARS

Human Race More or Less Dissatisfied is Pretty Well Off.

Speaking of years and youth, and age, and such things, what are they, anyway? There is an insect that lives only 24 hours—that is an old man at noon and shuffles off at midnight. On the other hand there is the crow, that lives a hundred years and croaks every day of the whole hundred years and there is also the elephant, who lives a hundred and fifty years and sometimes two hundred and maybe misses a lot of fun that even a 24-hour insect may have—for you will have to admit that an insect can do things and go places that an elephant can't.

Then there is the swan, which lives a hundred years, too, and never says a word, or at least is never allowed to sing, until it dies. A wren lives only two or three, but sings all it wants to, and the neighbors never complain. All a swan does is to swim around and never say a word, but a wren hears all the news and gossips as much as it likes.

And consider the monkey and the tortoise, too. You may be surprised to learn that a monkey lives only 16 to 18 years, because you are sure you know some that are older than that. A tortoise lives a hundred, for tortoises have been found with dates carved on them, tortoises who were born before the Mexican war and are probably still wondering how it came out. And yet a man would a good deal rather make a monkey of himself than almost anything else. No one ever heard of a man making a turtle of himself.

There is the crocodile, too, which scientists tell us lives to be a hundred; and you know how popular a crocodile is. A dog lives only 30 years at the most and a horse 30, and a cat only 18, but no one ever keeps a crocodile, even tho they keep so much better.

No, sir, it doesn't matter how long you live; what matters is how long you are living it. A rhinoceros lives only 20 years, but while he does the just about has his own way. A parrot lives 80 years longer, but no one ever tries to make a rhinoceros say "Pretty Polly." I never heard a parrot say it yet who didn't seem ashamed of himself; and as for a rhinoceros saying it, why that is unthinkable.

One thing, at least, seems to be certain: Man has it about right. It would be tough to live only a day, like the insect mentioned and never know how the Reds finished or how the Tigers came out; and on the other hand it would be equally tough to be an elephant and have to listen to a lot of wise cracks by a lot of people 150 to 175 years younger than you are.

Yes, sir, we are pretty well off as we are, the more or less dissatisfied human race.

HAVE SIXTH SENSE

Vipers Believed to Possess Unknown Faculty.

New York Curator Says Exact Nature of Reptile's Sixth Sense is Incomprehensible to Man.

The intuitive flash commonly known as a hunch or a sixth sense has been explained more or less satisfactorily by Freud and other psychologists as it applies to man, but no one ever psychoanalyzed a snake. Hence the mysterious sixth sense of the lowly pit viper is still a poser.

In the opinion of Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of reptiles at the Bronx zoo, the exact nature of the snake's sixth sense is incomprehensible to man, as he possesses no vestige of the unknown faculty himself.

It is only in that type of snake distinguished by a slight indentation in front of the eyes on each side of the head, and generally known as pit vipers, that the puzzling phenomenon is present. The indentation is the outward indication of a series of two cavities sunk into the snake's skull. It is a simple but delicate organ, well lined with a sensitive membrane and connected with what passes for a brain in the reptile. It is evidently in active operation, and its condition shows that it is not a lingering vestige of an outgrown stage of evolution as are the small bones which prove that snakes once had legs.

The pit viper, which includes the rattlesnake, moccasin, copperhead and "fer-de-lance," has the same rudimentary inner ears as other serpents, and must use its forked tongue on the tuning fork principle to hear. In that connection it is no better than the garden variety of snake. But in most other ways it is infinitely superior. It can almost think.

Inasmuch as the only type of serpent which does display signs of mental power at all is distinguished by the pit it is logical to presume that it is the seat of the snake's sixth sense.

Snakes certainly are not intelligent, says Mr. Ditmars, and they are incapable of reasoning. Yet some of the acts performed by pit vipers can only be explained in one of two ways—either they have a mysterious added sense or they have the capacity for memory and so can profit by experience. Scientists who have studied reptiles are convinced that the former theory is the more tenable.

Such snakes seem to sense the presence or approach of an enemy and even detect the imminence of other forms of danger. Too, they have a homing instinct more remarkable than the homing pigeon, which at least has the advantage of a bird's-eye view. No matter how far afield a rattlesnake may roam in the course of a summer it will invariably return with unerring accuracy to its hibernating place when the air becomes chilly.

There is only one species of pit viper indigenous to the tropics and that displays the same faculty in regard to its regular home as the hibernating species of the North. And its talents as a weather prophet would put to shame the best efforts of our learned experts with all their apparatus.—New York Sun-Globe.

Putting Drama in Its Place.

An idea of some of the difficulties under which people throughout the country labor in any attempt to reap profit from judgment and opinion in matters artistic will be gained from the following experience of the late Creston Clarke, the actor:

While playing in a good-sized city he was approached one day on the street by an eager young man, who said:

"How do you do, Mr. Clarke? I saw your performance last night. I'm on the—"

"Oh!" said Mr. Clarke. "And how do you like newspaper work?"

"I think it's fine," replied the youth. "I'm just starting in at it. I'm only dramatic critic now, but if I do well they're going to give me police work."—From Everybodys Magazine.

Poor Henry!

A Baltimore man who was formerly a resident of a town on the Eastern Shore recently revisited his old home town after an absence of many years. One day he was talking with an old friend about various people he formerly knew.

"What became of the Hall family?" he inquired.

"Oh," said the latter, "Tom Hall did very well. Got to be an actor out on the Pacific coast. Bill, the other brother, is something of an artist in New York, and Lucy, the sister, is doing literary work. But Henry never amounted to much. It took all he could lay his hands on to support the others."—From the Baltimore Sun.

FLYING SQUADRON

No. 1 Speakers Will be Here Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

The Flying Squadron in behalf of prohibition and law enforcement will be in Circleville at the First Methodist Episcopal church Saturday, Sunday and Monday, September 15, 16 and 17. Two meetings will be held daily at 3 and 7 o'clock p. m.

First Day.

Hon. Frank S. Regan, lawyer, cartoonist and chalk talker. Twenty-six years on the lyceum platform. A whirlwind of entertainment.

Second Day

Dr. D. Leigh Colvin, author and political scientist. Will conduct Law Enforcement conference in the afternoon.

Third Day

Hon. Oliver Wayne Stewart, president of the Foundation, editor National Enquirer, former associate of ex-Governor Hanly. One of the greatest platform speakers in America. Rev. Norma C. Brown, formerly chaplain Illinois senate. A most charming and impressive speaker.

Hoist by His Own Petard.

A working sense of fun is a good thing to possess, for sometimes if the humor of a situation cannot take the place of cash there is no compensation at all. A case in point is that of H. D. Traill, an English litterateur. One of Traill's earliest journalistic commissions was to write a series of articles in a paper edited by a lady well known years ago as a strong advocate of "women's rights," as the phrase went, on the anomalies and injustices of the British law relating to woman's property. The articles were duly written and published, but the remuneration agreed upon was not forthcoming. After repeated but fruitless demands for payment Traill brought a suit against the lady, who successfully invoked against her contributor the law she had engaged him to attack.

And the Hunter Couldn't Answer.

A hunter and a golfer were at it hammer and tongs. "To thunder with hunting," said the golfer, "I can buy all the meat I want in a butcher shop, and it's better than you can shoot." "Is that so?" said the hunter. "Can you buy jacksnipe in a butcher shop? Can you buy venison? Can you buy canvasback?" "Sometimes," said the golfer, "and sometimes not. But you can go hunting and shoot a pound of pork sausage?"

Heart Trouble Not Fatal.

Heart disease is not the barrier to an active life of usefulness as has always been supposed, said Dr. Frederick Brush to the National Society for the Promotion of Occupational Therapy. Nothing is gained and much lost by telling cardiac patients not to work, not to carry, not to play, and so on. Under proper supervision the person with heart trouble can take a large part in active life.

Patched-Up Organ.

A prominent poetess writes: "My heart sings only when it breaks." As she averages one such song per week, what a condition her heart must be in.—Boston Transcript.

AMUSEMENTS

The Paramount picturization of "Mr. Billings Spends His Dime" from the novel by Dana Burnet, Walter Hiers' first star comedy, was heartily enjoyed at its premier showing at the Met theater last evening.

John Percival Billings, a haberdashery salesman, is down to his last thin dime. What to do—eat, drink? He does neither but invests his remaining capital in a long black cigar. Therein lies a tale. What woe what trials and sufferings that purchase caused him! but, nevertheless, it brought him sweet romance, with Jacqueline Logan as his foil.

Between dodging a love sick girl and escaping the clutches of a band of revolutionists in South America, Hiers has one of the fastest moving comedy drama roles we have ever seen. There are many genuine thrills in the picture, if a novel bullfight and near assassination mean anything. Opening in New York with a generous portion of ocean scenes and a thrilling climax in a small South American republic, this picture has an unusual variety of backgrounds.

Thru the spending of a dime, Hiers gets himself into a revolution; outwits a bunch of conspirators; narrowly escapes a firing squad and wins for himself a beautiful girl. This ought to be enough action even for a wild west thriller. Miss Logan's work is admirable.

The essential point in all flower arrangement is that there shall be form and balance, yet that the composition shall not be perfectly symmetrical, as perfect symmetry is not found in nature. ## JOE'S STORY

By JANE GORDON

(© 1923, Western Newspaper Union)

JOE came out into the garden and looked down the road.

In Joe's honest eyes was an expression of wistful longing not unlike the hurt look of Ted, the dog, when reproved for wrongdoing. But Joe had not been reproved. There was no one interested enough to reprove him or even to sympathize in his loneliness.

Joe was quite alone, not only in these hills which stretched so far before, but Joe was alone in the world. He could not remember his mother, and the memories he had of his father were not pleasant. A stern, forbidding man, Joe's father, now dead. Joe recalled the endless doing of tasks about the farm home, but he could recall no word of kindly appreciation.

Early he had been obliged to go out—like lads of olden story—to earn his living adventurously or not. One season Joe had traveled with a small opera troupe trying to make merchandise of his talent for music. The violin, which was his solace, was not his fortune. Some way he managed to get to college, for the profession of an engineer was his goal. And at college he still worked, and later taught, accomplishing that which alone had seemed impossible. Then came the tragedy. The college doctor dealt un- happily the cruel blow. Joe's lungs were no good. Too much night work, added to steady day work, the elderly man pronounced. There was one hopeful promise—mountain air and rest. So Joe alone had found his way to the high hills to solitude in a deserted cottage, shabby and unfurnished.

The garden flourished for it was there that the lonely man sought healing from nature as he labored in the sun. His pride was his flock of white hens. Joe's chickens became to him understanding friends, yielding payment for interested care. But, oh, the loneliness and longing that was ever unsatisfied. Who, in among strangers, might be found to bear him company in his difficult retreat? He had not gone to visit the doctor again for railroad fare cost money, which he could not spare.

Joe knew that he was growing stronger—his own physician in a test of climbing hills and further tests of endurance. And so he measured his days of hope as strength grew. If one day he might once more take a try at that career long dreamed of and labored for—to plan great bridges, to carve tunnels through the earth—to achieve! He had renounced that happier dream, which is a young man's right, of a home—home which he had hardly known—of a wife, gentle, dependent. Who might learn to love a broken man? Who might care to make the sacrifice? And so had grown Joe's eyes, wistful with the sorrow of all renunciation.

The sun sank down behind the nearest hill. The marigolds reflecting its light, the shabby old door of the old house stood open, inviting to his solitary meal.

Then the gate creaked, was drawn noisily back. A young woman stood smiling beneath the maple tree. She looked very much like charming maids he had admired upon magazine covers. She came toward him.

"How do you do?" remarked the maid. "Are you the man who supplies the store in the village with white, fresh eggs?"

Joe, with a recollection of college manner, admitted the fact.

"Then," said the young lady, "may I have a few dozen? They were out at the store and I've driven and walked all the way up. Had to leave my car, you know, where the road stops."

She could not know that Joe's silence was born of joy in the presence of one of that world from which he had been exiled, so she went on in her agreeable voice to explain:

"My father is stopping at the Inn. It's a wretched stopping place. And he is ill; the doctor ordered plenty of milk with eggs. Father," the girl said, "has charge of this engineering project through the mountain."

Joe came to himself. Together the two gathered the eggs—together they robbed the garden of its choicest blooms. And led on by his visitor's interested sympathy and by his pent-up longing, Joe told the story of his disappointment and of his banishment. The blue eyes of the listener were very lovely in their concern.

The following morning found her again at the gate of Joe's garden. Her father, the noted engineer, was with her and they lingered companionably, exchanging confidences.

Autumn's red had changed the mountain trees a second time before the trio again entered between the rows of tangled brush. The shabby house was unoccupied now and echoed silence. The elderly engineer smoked contentedly, while Joe, a broad-shouldered, happy Joe, and the girl of the blue eyes wandered about the familiar place, a joyous dog beside them.

"Think," the young woman said, "if that day I had not happened to come up here for the eggs, I might never have met you. Oh, Joe!"

"But you did come," her husband said, "bringing love and good fortune in your dear hands. For if I don't prove the best assistant engineer your father has ever had—it won't be my fault."

The sun went down victoriously behind the nearest hill. Joe was to know loneliness no more.

HARTMAN THEATER

No picture that has even been presented in Columbus, not even "The Birth of a Nation" has been received with more enthusiastic acclaim by the thousands who crowd the theater than the much talked of picturization of Emerson Hough's great novel "The Covered Wagon" now playing twice daily at the Hartman theater, Columbus and which the management has decided to continue for another week.

In his criticism in the Columbus Dispatch H. E. Cherrington writes: "Covered Wagon is Hartman triumph. So big, so suggestive, so vital and so important we could scarcely grasp the grandeur of it all. "The Covered Wagon" will move you like a burst of sunrise or a flash of heroic banners."

Daisy H. Krier in the Ohio State Journal says: "The picture is an inspiration, a clean picture of the days in the late forties. It is worth regular theater prices."

And the critic of the Columbus Citizen has this to say: "Incomparable in its settings and unerring in every detail, "The Covered Wagon" brings to the screen an inspiration."

Matinee and night performances are given daily, including Sunday and mail orders for next week are now being filled in the order of their receipt.

Greasewood Often Is Poisonous to Sheep

Dangerous Feed When Taken in Large Quantities.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Greasewood, a shrubby plant very plentiful on the range in some parts of the West, has been the cause of occasional large losses of sheep. This plant was listed as poisonous 25 years ago, but only recently have investigations been made by the United States Department of Agriculture which brought out definite information concerning the symptoms and the conditions under which poisoning will occur. The results of this work are contained in Department Circular 279, entitled "Greasewood as a Poisonous Plant."

The investigations have established that under most conditions this plant is a good forage for sheep, and dangerous when it is taken in considerable quantities, at least 1.5 pounds to the hundredweight of animal, in a very short time. Losses may be prevented by taking care that sheep do not graze too long on greasewood when they are very hungry. Animals that once show the symptoms usually die; in other words, a quantity of the plant which will cause the symptoms will cause death.

The greasewood plant, which is sometimes known as "chico," is light-green colored, scraggly, with spiny branches and slender, fleshy leaves about 1 1/2 inches long. It is commonly recognized by western stockmen, but there are several other plants sometimes called greasewood.

Copies of the circular may be obtained without cost, as long as the supply lasts, by writing to the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Excellent Ration for Fattening Market Ducks

Ducks are fattened easier and quicker than any other class of poultry, if they are properly fed and handled. Here is an excellent fattening ration: Two parts cornmeal, one part each of wheat bran and middlings, one part ground oats, two parts ground beef scrap. To this add three or four per cent of coarse sand or grit and mix the whole together with milk, sweet or sour. Give them all they will eat of this mixture three times a day, if you are in a big hurry to force them along; or, if you haven't time to do that, give them the mash as often as convenient, and keep dry grains before them in boxes all the time. See that they have plenty of water to drink, and keep it in troughs so that several ducks can partake at the same time. Don't give them too much liberty while fattening them for market, for they fatten quicker in small quiet runs. Ducks are nervous and easily frightened; dogs and loud strangers often cause serious disturbances. A thorough fright will cause a duck to lose more flesh and healthy growth in half an hour than good care and food will restore in several days. That may sound like nonsense, but it's the experience of all who have tried it.

Males Not Needed for Breeding Should Be Sold

Unless your roosters are worth saving for mating purposes, get rid of them. Keep them away from the hens, for infertile eggs will command a premium over the fertile kind.

Scrub roosters, and even pure bred cockerels that are not good enough to command a price from other breeders, should be made ready for the market. There is no reason why any farmer or poultryman should go on feeding a lot of useless birds. Put them in a pen and fatten them before sending them to market. Unless too old, you will make a profit on your feed because a fat bird will sell more readily, and of course weighs more. Roosterless farms are not uncommon in some sections of the country.

Laying Age of Pullets of Different Breeds

An observation of the average number of days required to mature Leghorns, Rocks and Reds as handled at the Nebraska college of agriculture shows the following: Single Comb White Leghorns, 205 days; Barred Rocks, 230 days; Single Comb Rhode Island Reds, 250 days. The age at time of laying the first egg was taken as an index of maturity. Therefore, such medium maturing breeds as Rhode Island Reds, Barred and White Rocks, Orpingtons, Langshans, etc., should be hatched as near March 1 as possible if they are to be old enough to lay by November 1, or in time to catch the highest prices of the year. The necessity for early hatching is not so great with Leghorns. They mature so early that April-hatched pullets seem to have the advantage.

Keep Track of Broody Hens of Various Breeds

In dual-purpose breeds, all hens that become broody should be given a celluloid leg band for each offense. It is easy to keep track of them in this way and as those that have frequent broody spells cannot possibly make good records, they should be marketed. Birds that, without having clearly inferior characters, are under suspicion, should be moved to a separate pen and given further trial.

MONDAY CLUB

Interesting Talk by Mrs. Frances Abernethy Reeder—Subject for Year.

The first meeting of the Monday club for the year 1923-1924 was held Monday evening. Mrs. B. K. Clapp, retiring, gave the gavel to Mrs. W. T. Uim, the incoming president.

The subject of the club calendar for this year is Outstanding Points of Interest in a Trip Around the World—A Study of Places Where History was Made. Monday evening's program was China. Roll call. Interesting facts about China. (1) President's Address; (2) Our Calendar, Mrs. A. L. Wilder; (3) address, Weishien, China, Mrs. Charles Reeder.

In her splendid address, the president dwelt upon what this age is to woman. "Do you realize, what it is to be an American Woman? She dwelt upon the responsibility of woman's new citizenship and the power of that responsibility. Mrs. Reeder disclaiming any pretense of a formal address talked of the Chinese as she knew them. Mrs. Reeder was Miss Frances Abernethy of Circleville before her marriage to Mr. Charles Reeder, a missionary to Weishien, China, and her audience found her very pleasing and charming as she told of the many peculiar customs of this patient, stolid people and of some of the amusing experiences she had had in her life of four years with them.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"Kelly, what do you think of—O—the Hotel Stenographer interrupted herself, "you are chewing gum. You cannot think of anything when you chew gum."

"What were you starting to say?" asked the House Detective.

"I was going to ask you what you thought of the germ theory," said the girl. "It is getting so now that they will not feed a baby milk until they have run it thru the food chopper to kill the germs. If they hadn't robbed the calf for which the milk was intended, but people are getting weaker, or else germs are multiplying. "Old-fashioned people kissed each other early, often and earnestly, and never thought of germs. Now they say if you are not mighty particular whom you kiss you will catch pelegra, or something, altho none of the fellows I hop around with have it.

"There is as much luck catching germs as there is catching husbands. There are good germs, good for what ails you. There are bad ones that make you mighty sick, even when you are healthy. Husbands are like that. Some women marry a good man and blossom like a rose, and others marry bums and go on the fritz, and—"

"Did you say you wanted my opinion about all these things?" interrupted Kelly.

"Yes," said the girl.

"Then why don't you give me a chance to say somethin'? You make me think about my wife. She is a dialogue. She asks me questions and then answers them herself."

FOUR FACE DEMPSEY

Two Knocked Out and the Others Are Pounded Mercilessly.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Four men faced Jack Dempsey, with the result that the champion knocked out a pair of them and pounded around the others in merciless fashion. Dempsey entered the ring with a heavy growth of whiskers and in a surly sort of mood. George West, an English middleweight, was the first victim. Dempsey slammed and jammed West. He plunked him and then bumped him. West planned to go two rounds, but was through after one. Then came Jack Burke. After two rounds Burke climbed through the ropes. The next victim was just getting elated over the score of a few left jabs, when—Wow! Then they brought on Alex Trambits as Frank was carried away. Trambits, who middleweights around the country, hopped about a bit and then Dempsey turned loose a left and a right. They lifted Alex from the kindly ropes.

CHIEF OF TRIBE SACRIFICES SON

South African Youth Burned to Death to Appease Wrath of Great Spirit.

Cincinnati.—Sir Clarkson Tredgold, the senior judge of southern Rhodesia, and a jury were engaged for two days investigating the circumstances in which Manduza, the second surviving son of Chief Chigango, of a section of the Mtwara tribe, was offered up as a sacrifice to appease the wrath of the Mwari (the Great Spirit).

Those charged with the crime of murder included Chigango, the father of the victim; Chiswiti, the paramount chief of the district, whose only proved share of the proceedings was the provision of an escort to carry out the orders of Chigango; Chiriseri, a headman of a neighboring kraal, and four "police boys," or priests, who, acting on orders, carried out the ceremony. The paramount chief was found not guilty and discharged; the others were found guilty and sentenced to death. In passing sentence the judge announced that he would support the strong recommendation to mercy with which the jury has coupled their verdict, says Henri Pickard in the Cincinnati Enquirer.

Crops Burned by Sun.

In January last the Mtwara tribe, in common with others, saw their crops being destroyed by a scorching sun and starvation staring them in the face. Suspicion fell on Manduza—that he had angered the Great Spirit—and his father ordered that he should be put to death with all the customary ceremony. It came out in evidence that Chigango could not trust his own people to execute this decree, and obtained an escort of about seventy from Chiswiti, so that the victim should not allow his courage to fail and seek safety in flight.

Manduza was conveyed in the night to Chiswiti's "sitting place." Instructions came from Chigango that his son should be sacrificed. An eyewitness of the scene described how Manduza's hands were bound with a limbo, specially kept for such occasions, and was then carried by the "police boys" to a place where a wood fire had been prepared. The man was laid on the pyre and further timber placed over him. It did not transpire that he offered any resistance. By daybreak nothing remained but a pile of ashes and human bones, from which the flesh had been burned.

Chief's Son Notifies Police.

In the meantime Chigango's second son, who heard what had happened to his brother, and evidently feared that he might be marked out for the same fate, went to the police post at Mount Darwin and reported the occurrence. A police trooper and four native police boys visited the scene, made certain inquiries, and marched 80 natives, who seemed to have been concerned in the case, to Mount Darwin, where the investigations were continued and the preliminary examination held. In a statement made on that occasion by one of those afterward placed on trial, the following passage occurred: "I admit we were caught, and are now to die for the fault of our chief and headman. Chigango came to Chiriseri and told him he wanted him to take and burn his son, Manduza. Chiriseri refused to do so, saying that we were under the white people's rule now. Chigango said: 'I burnt Mgurakoko and Manyondi, and the white people have not heard, and they will not hear of this.' The statement as to two previous sacrifices having taken place in recent years at the same site is believed to be true.

The Rhodesian police and law departments have had to deal with a considerable number of charges of murder arising out of witchcraft and the machination of witch doctors, or the outcome of deep-rooted tribal superstition, but this is the first instance in which they have been able to obtain evidence of human sacrifice in accordance with old-established rites.

Rained "Diamonds" in This Man's Back Yard

London.—Does it ever rain diamonds?

C. P. Fitzgerald, expert metallurgist, is seriously asking this question. During a recent thunderstorm there fell in his garden several meteorites weighing about six pounds each, and so hard that fragments of them will cut glass.

Fitzgerald said the meteorites exactly resemble the diamond-bearing quartz found in South Africa, and he has sent his finds to a laboratory for examination.

Wisconsin Town Has Modern Pied Piper

The "Pied Piper of Hamelin," who led rats into the river by music, has a rival in the person of Bert Mobbers, dam tender, of Appleton, Wis.

Bert, for many moons while working on the dam, was pestered by too friendly rats. They would crawl about his legs.

The "Pied Piper" of Appleton now throws lye on the boards about the dam. The lye clings to the wet feet of the rats and burns them. The rats then commit suicide by licking their feet.
